Air Hijack Heading For Peking

From AP-UPI

HONG KONG—A Filipino airliner seized by five armed men and carrying 25 hostages landed in Canton today in what was believed to be the first hijack to Communist China.

The plane had 44 passengers and five crew members aboard when it reached Hong Kong. But 19 of the men, women and children aboard were allowed to leave the plane in Hong Kong and the plane flew on to mainland China with an estimated 30 persons aboard—five hijackers and 25 hostages.

The hijackers said they intended to fly to Peking but their first landing was in Canton, 50 miles distant.

During their refueling stopover in Hong Kong a British airport official, J. F. Pickering, went aboard the plane with his hands up and persuaded the hijackers to release 19 of the 44 passengers and five crew members aboard.

Pickering said the hijackers at first agreed to release all of the passengers but later decided to keep some of them as hostages. They also threatened to blow up the plane if it was not allowed to proceed to Peking.

The 19 men, women and children who were released were made to sit under the wingtip of the plane until the refueling was completed and the plane taxied away for takeoff.

An airport spokesman who talked to the released passengers quoted them as saying there were five hijackers, four of them Filipinos and a fifth of unknown nationality.

The hijackers were armed with two pistols, a carbine and a pair of scissors, the passengers said.

"Air traffic authorities at Canton were asked to facilitate landing of the plane there and its onward flight to Peking," an airport spokesman said.

"Canton authorities said they would reply in due course. This information was passed on to the hijackers but they apparently decided to take off without waiting," the spokesman said.

If Chinese authorities permitted the plane to land, it was expected that they would release the plane, its crew and passengers and permit them to return to the Philippines. This was the assessment of diplomatic analysts specializing in Chinese affairs.

Authorities first reported that only one hijacker was involved. But Pickering made two trips to the plane and the second time a man who appeared to be a Filipino stood in the doorway of the

House Passes Pensions Bill

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

Two Socred backbenchers voted with the opposition against new retired teachers pensions Monday, and a third abstained, but all three dissidents were back into line for the final vote.

Premier Bennett called two rapid-fire divisions at the end of the two-hour debate — the first to approve the entire teacher pension bill in committee and the second to give it third and final reading by the house — which passed by identical votes of 31 to 17.

In both cases the NDP and Liberal members, who had voiced strong objections to section four of the bill which sets out new pensions for retired teachers, voted against the government.

On the question of whether this contentious section should be passed Ernie LeCours (SC—Richmond) and Herb Capozzi (SC—vancouver Centre) said they were opposed and Dr. Scott Wallace (SC—Oak Bay) said he would abstain. Other Socreds expressed reservations.

The section eventually passed by a vote of 28 to 19.

When all the remaining sections in the bill had been approved by voice vote of the committee, Bennett called for a division. Swivelling in his chair, the premier said: "This is on the whole bill. If you want teachers to get increased pensions vote now. We'll see who is against the teachers."

When the opposition, following that division, objected to giving third and final reading to the bill immediately, Bennett called the second standing vote count. He taunted the NDP and Liberal members saying: "Teachers are going to laugh at you all around this province because you are against teachers' pensions. How stupid can you get?"

In the lengthy debate on section four of the bill Opposition Leader Dave Barrett challenged the government to take the approximately $1 million in teacher salaries which it is asking school boards to refund for the one-day teachers strike March 19, and apply it immediately to the raising of retired teachers pensions.

"If you are sincere and not cynical" the NDP leader told the government members, "then lay this money on the table for the retired teachers."

LeCours said this government, like all governments in Canada, was prepared to keep the masses happy and forget about the down-trodden.

While the pension plan was "very good" for active teachers, he said, the government should have explained why it was applying a different formula for computing pensions for those already retired. The Socred also critic-

VANCOUVER (CP) — A grain trade spokesman said Monday the shutdown of rail traffic in British Columbia and parts of Alberta has left wheat supplies in the port of Vancouver in a hopeless state.

"The situation is deplorable and just hopeless — what else can I say?" said Tom Milroy, vice-resident of the Vancouver Grain Exchange.

Edward Strang, president of the B.C. Maritime Employers Association, said four ships were loading grain Monday compared with nine last Thursday.

A grain trade official in Winnipeg said in a telephone interview that the rail shutdown "will impede Canada's ability to meet her export commitments on time."

One Vancouver spokesman said the situation is desperate and "as far as we are concerned, the month of April is shot . . . ships will be

Murder of At Least 22

Calley Convicted, Death Possibility

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI) — Lieut. William L. Calley Jr. was found guilty Monday of the premeditated murder of at least 22 Vietnamese civilians at My Lai, and was led away to await sentencing — possibly to death.

Calley, his face flushed pink, snapped a weak salute when he heard the verdict, but did not break down.

He was the first U.S. soldier convicted in the March 16, 1968, massacre in which — according to varying estimates — between 102 and 310 persons were slaughtered.

The 27-year-old defendant admitted from the witness stand that he executed villagers, but said he did so on orders from his commanding officer.

In addition to the 22 murders, Calley was also convicted of assault with intent to murder a two-year-old child. A witness testified Calley shot at a child, but couldn't be sure the bullets struck the infant. For that reason the panel of officers reduced the murder charge to assault. The same panel must determine the sentence.

Moments after the six-officer panel rendered its verdict, the judge's office was deluged with phone calls, many of them demanding to know why Calley was convicted.

Defence attorney George Latimer vowed to appeal the case "as high as possible — 90 grounds (reasons) or so."

Calley's court-martial, which began Nov. 12, was the longest military trial in U.S. history, and it took the panel 13 days to bring in a verdict. Four votes were necessary for a conviction.

The court-martial manual says death or life imprisonment is mandatory for premeditated murder, but it also says there must be a unanimous vote for death, and that five of the six officers must vote for a life sentence.

The verdict hit Calley and his attorneys like a sledge. Latimer predicted U.S. soldiers on the field of battle will be less likely to obey, and another defence lawyer, Richard Kay, added: "I just don't see how a military man can be guilty of premedidated murder in a combat situation."

Witnesses testified that Calley and his men thought they were going to find the 48th Viet Cong Battalion when they landed in My Lai, but instead found unresisting civilians.

During the more than eight hours Calley spent on the stand, he testified that even the civilians were suspect, however, because of the many mine fields and sniper fire that had taken a heavy toll in U.S. ranks.

He said he executed some of the villagers when his commander, Capt. Ernest L. Medina, told him to "waste" the villagers if he couldn't move them, since they were holding up the infantry sweep.

Manson

From UPI

There have been no executions in the United States since 1967, when two men were executed, one of them in California.

With the addition of Charles Manson and his women codefendants, there are 111 persons in U.S. prisons facing the death penalty.

No women have been executed since 1962.

Of the 3,856 persons executed between 1930 and 1965, only 32 were women.

Jury Rules Death For Manson, Girls

● Manson's 'family' in bald protest. Page 7

LOS ANGELES (UPI) Death in the gas chamber was decreed by a jury Monday for cult leader Charles Manson and three of his young women disciples for the savage murders of pregnant actress Sharon Tate and six other persons.

Following a sensational trial that lasted nine and one-half months, a middle-class, mainly middle-aged jury brought in the death verdicts for the 36-year-old Manson, and Patricia Krenwinkel, Susan Atkins and Leslie Van Houten.

Appeals of the death penalty will take three to five years it was estimated.

Manson was hauled shouting from the courtroom before the verdicts were even read. And the minute the death penalty was returned against the three women, they began shouting and were dragged bodily from the courtroom by bailiffs before they learned their own fates.

Superior court Judge Charles Older, a former Flying Tiger pilot, told the jurors that, if it was within his power, he would give them the medal of honor for service "above and beyond the call of duty."

In an action rarely seen in courtrooms here, Older stepped down from his bench and walked to the jury box where he shook hands with each of the 12 regular jurors and the three remaining alternates.

Manson, whose outbursts periodically disrupted the marathon trial, looked like a little old man with sunken eyes as he was first led into the courtroom to hear the verdict. A stubble of hair was on his head and he was clad in a drab, blue denim jail uniform.

"You have no authority," he called out to the jury within minutes. "Half of you aren't as good as I am to begin with."

He was led out sputtering by a bailiff.

When the first of eight death verdicts was read against Manson, Miss Atkins shouted out, "You all have judged yourselves." The judge ordered her ejected.

Then Miss Krenwinkel yelled, "You're removing yourself from the face of the earth." Miss van Houten shouted that "the whole system is to make money."

The jurors, seven men and five women, had only the alternatives of death or life imprisonment after the long trial.

They convicted all four of first degree murder last Jan. 25 in the killings of the blonde actress, coffee heiress Abigail Folger, men's hairstylist Jay Sebring, Polish film writer Voityck Frykowski, high school student Steven Parent, grocery chain owner Leno LaBianca and his wife, Rosemary.

Manson never took the witness stand in the presence of the jury. The girls, ranging in age from 21 to 23, all confessed but tried to absolve Manson of any connection with the murders.

'Hells of War All At Once'

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP) — "I hope My Lai isn't a tragedy but an eye-opener, even for people who say war is hell," said Lieut. William L. Calley, who was convicted Monday of the premeditated murder of 22 unresisting Vietnamese civilians.

Calley, 27, was white-faced and visibly shaken after the verdict in his court martial, unprecedented in army history. No other American had ever before stood accused of murdering more than 100 persons.

"My Lai has happened in every way; it's not an isolated incident, even in Vietnam," he said.

"The thing that makes My Lai so unique, it was a small tragedy in a small place, but for once, man was able to see all the hells of war all at once.

"I can't say I am proud of ever being at My Lai, or ever participating in war. But I will be extremely proud if My Lai shows the world what war is and that the world needs to do something about stopping wars.

"Many people say war is hell who have never experienced it, but it is more than hell for those people tied up in it," Calley said.

Accused Changes Mind About RCMP Courage

CRANBROOK, (CP) — Dale Merle Nelson discovered the quality and courage of the RCMP while being "hunted" by them, says a hand-written statement read in court Monday at his non-capital murder trial.

The statement, written while Nelson was awaiting trial in Oakalla prison, said he had looked upon the RCMP "as a spineless, backstabbing bunch of jesters" and had taught his children to fear and ridicule them.

Nelson said he had changed his opinion while watching members of the force while they searched for him. He said he could only stare in fascination as a corporal walked calmly towards him during his capture.

He added he could not bring himself to shoot, even though his rifle was at hand. Nelson described himself as a marksman who "could hit a soup can at 50 paces every shot without sights on my rifle."

He was apprehended Sept. 6 after one of British Columbia's largest manhunts, involving more than 40 RCMP officers and three tracking dogs, and set in motion by the discovery of the brutally-slain bodies of five children and three adults in the West Creston area of southeastern B.C.

Nelson is formally charged with the murder of Tracy Wasyk, 7, and Catherine St. Amand, 8.

RCMP officers testified about conversations they had with the accused while guarding him at the Creston jail where he was held briefly before being transferred to Oakalla.

Shakespearean Goodwill Doesn't Include Tourists

STRATFORD-ON-AVON, England (UPI) — Samuel Shakespeare, 90, said Sunday he does not mind tourists coming to see any evidence of his ancestor William except himself.

Shakespeare told newsmen every time tourists come to his door "I have to tell James, my manservant, to tell them to go away."

Samuel is the oldest living descendant of The Bard in The Bard's hometown and is a governor of the Stratford Theatre. He has seen Hamlet 20 times.

"Henry Irving (the actor) was the best (Hamlet). He patted me on the head once and said, 'I owe my living to your name'," Shakespeare said.

He said the family today is not quite up to William's literary stature. Samuel reads a tabloid newspaper, enjoys television serials and gave up writing an autobiography because he found himself mixing up adjectives and adverbs. "The family is very low-brow," he said.

But Samuel said he is regarded as the local master of one thing — keeping a roll-your-cigarette lit a long time. He can keep one going 30 minutes.

"I've had 70 years practice at this. I've never had a chap who could beat me yet," he said.

Buddhists Forgive

SAIGON (Reuter) — South Vietnam's militant anti-war Buddhists called today for clemency for Lieut. William Calley.

The An Quang Buddhist faction, which probably represents a majority of Vietnamese, will cable Calley's jurors asking them to spare the convicted killer, Venerable Huyen Quang, general secretary of the Unified Buddhist Church, said.

Kissing Dog on Mouth Not Advised Practice

By G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please explain the effects, good and bad, of kissing dogs on the mouth. Is it true that dogs carry fewer germs in the mouth than humans? My wife claims so. Kindly print some facts on this. — T.M.

I don't know how many dog-kissers there are, but there are some — my mail tells me so.

Effects, good and bad? Well, it's true that bacterial and other germ counts are lower in dogs' mouths, but that's a far cry, a very far cry, from saying there aren't any.

Various diseases can be transmitted from dogs to humans. These are called zoonoses (zoh-ON-oh-seez). More than a hundred of them have been identified, but not all involve dogs, of course. There are diseases that can be transmitted by cattle, cats, rodents, bats, rabbits, and other creatures.

So sticking just to dogs, transmittable disorders range from contact with saliva, skin, and excreta. (Some folks can be allergic to animals, too.)

Other disorders involve bacteria, viruses, parasites. For an example of the latter, dogs can have a parasite called the heart worm, and this has been found in human lungs.

Salmonella — a cause of "food poisoning" — can be transmitted by dogs — and other conditions.

Now in actuality, transmission of diseases from animals to man is not particularly common, but it can happen, and it does happen, and so far as I'm concerned, I'd just as soon not take any needless chances. So I, personally, do not kiss dogs on the mouth.

So far as that goes, I don't kiss them anywhere. I'm willing to stick to just patting them.

As to the benefits of kissing dogs on the mouth — I'm afraid I don't know any. And I seriously doubt if the dog will feel rejected or suffer any other emotional trauma by being deprived of kisses.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: One of our relatives, not yet six months old, has a cleft palate and is having digestive troubles as a result. What can be done, and how soon can it be corrected? — W.W.

I'm puzzled, as to why, in a city with the medical facilities yours has, something hasn't been done already. Cleft palate is usually treated a good bit younger than six months. This child ought to be taken to children's hospital or to a pediatrician. There's nothing you can do yourself about it.

plane and talked to Pickering as Pickering stood alongside — an indication that there were other hijackers keeping the passengers covered.

"The hijacker has told officials at the airport that he wants clearance to take off for Peking," a spokesman said. "In view of this demand the Chinese authorities have been informed by all possible channels."

Later, the control tower notified the pilot that he could start the aircraft's engines at his discretion. But they also told him that he should not try to take off until clearance was received from Chinese aviation authorities in Canton.

It was speculated that Canton would be the plane's first stop in China. The airport there is named White Cloud airport and it serves international flights of Pakistan International Airlines and other airlines regularly. It has modern equipment.

The Philippine vice-consul in Hong Kong, Juan Ona, went to the airport and offered himself as a hostage providing all the other passengers were released, the Philippine foreign office in Manila said. Apparently the offer was not accepted.

Control tower officials said the man they talked with aboard the plane spoke English "with what is presumed to be a Philippine accent."

Pickering said he first secured an agreement that all the passengers would be released. But later most of those aboard were held as hostages.

PAL officials in Hong Kong said the pilot asked for an escort plane to China. Airport authorities declined, but asked Chinese aviation authorities in Canton to provide an escort.

coming in fast and we won't have the grain to fill them."

"Even if the rail shutdown were to stop tomorrow, it will take another three to four weeks before things get back to normal," he added.

The Canadian Wheat Board was reported already paying demurrage charges for some ships backed up waiting to load grain.

A spokesman for the Grain Workers Union said 160 of its members already have been laid off in Vancouver and the number is expected to grow to about 200 — half the working force — by late today.

In Victoria it was believed that shipments of Eastern and American periodicals were being delayed because of the book-offs. A day shift of mail sorters was sent home early from the post office Monday because there was little mail for them to sort.

A post office spokesman said he was not sure the train stoppages were the reason for the lack of mail, but most periodicals and magazines usually travelled by train.

However, if it was discovered delays were being encountered, the post office would use trucks to move the mail within the province.

The shutdown also was affecting B.C.'s forest industry.

Bob Gallagher of the Northern Interior Lumbermen's Association said a "good percentage" of the 6,000 workers in mills in the Prince George district will be laid off this week due to a shortgage of boxcars.

A spokesman for the Council of Forest Industries said Evans Products will lay off 450 men at its two plywood mills in the Golden area and another 50 in Vancouver.

Apollo Test Postponed

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — The first manned test of the Apollo 15 moon landing ship in an airless chamber was postponed Monday until Wednesday because someone failed to open an oxygen valve.

The closed valve caused too much pressure to build up in spacesuit oxygen hoses in the spacecraft, but the space agency said there was no apparent damage. The problem occurred before backup astronauts Richard Gordon and Harrison Schmitt boarded the lunar module.

ized B.C. Teacher's Federation officials for being more concerned about their own pension than those of retired teachers.

Capozzi expressed concern about the government's apparent failure to make clear to teachers that the door was open for further talks aimed at providing better pensions for retired teachers in the near future.

Wallace said it was arguable whether the government or the BCTF was more to blame for the plight of retired teachers whose inadequate pension increases made him "very unhappy."

Limiting his comments to general principles in a highly complicated field, Wallace said: "All I'm saying is that retired teachers aren't getting a fair shake."

He suggested the teaching profession should "put its money where its mouth is" and either offer to contribute another one-half per cent of their salary or else dilute some pension increases of up to 40 per cent in order to help their retired colleagues.

Robert Wenman (SC—Delta) and Bert Price (SC—Burrard) were among the Socreds who expressed reservations about the handling of retired teachers pensions but voted with the government on the section.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, a former schoolteacher, said the one-day strike by teachers in support of higher pensions for their retired colleagues was a "professional disgrace" because it amounted simply to "taking a day off at the end of the week."

Liberal leader Patrick McGeer said the Liberals favored higher pensions for retired teachers who are "getting a raw deal."

RCMP To Ride Music Highway

The RCMP Musical Ride and the RCMP military band will tour B.C. as part of B.C.'s Centennial 71 celebrations, Lawrie Wallace, general chairman of B.C. Centennial 71 Committee, has announced.

The musical ride will be performed in 21 communities, and the RCMP band will hold concerts in 17 locations, Wallace said.

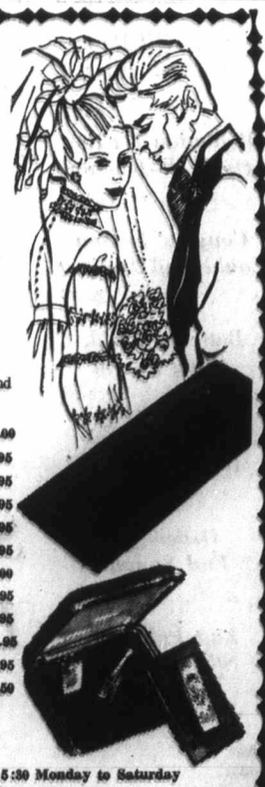

"This is a great tribute to the historic importance of the 100th birthday of B.C. in Confederation," Wallace said.

The RCMP band will perform in Victoria May 19 and in Nanaimo May 20. The ride itinerary will be announced later.

Still Reeling

Hard-Hit Base Shelled Anew By North Guns

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese gunners levelled a mortar barrage Monday at a U.S. artillery base still reeling from an attack by infiltrators that killed at least 33 Americans and wounded 76 in what may have been the heaviest death toll on a U.S. installation in the war.

The casualties were expected to go still higher from Sunday's attack on Base Mary Ann in northern South Vietnam on the basis of still-incomplete reports from the U.S. command.

Communications with the base were spotty more than 24 hours after the attack, apparently because of damage to the command bunker. Twelve North Vietnamese dead were reported found.

The artillery base, located in the jungle 50 miles south of Da Nang, and manned by a battalion from the Aemrical Division has been reported reinforced, however, and no additional casualties were reported from the mortar attack Monday moning.

The North Vietnamese also shelled a Vietnamese resettlement village about 25 miles north of Base Mary Ann and followed up with an attack by infiltrators Monday, killing 13 civilians and wounding 21. One hundred houses were destroyed.

North Vietnamese gunners also shelled Chu Lai, coastal headquarters of the Americal Division, and hit the Da Nang air base 50 miles to the north.

Field reports said several wounded at Da Nang. No damage or casualties were reported at Chu Lai.

Associated Press correspondent reported from Quang Ti, that a U.S.-supported South Vietnamese raid on a major North Vietnamese headquarters on the Ho Chi Minh Trail inside Laos was cancelled at the last minute because of heavy anti-aircraft fire.

The target area was about 30 miles south of the sector which was the focal point of the recently-completed South Vietnamese thrust into Laos.

Air Support Too Little Says Saigon

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — South Vietnamese military officials say United States air support for the recently-ended Laotian incursion was insufficient to meet the mission's objectives, the Baltimore Sun says in a dispatch from Saigon.

Sun correspondent Michael Parks reports U.S. military spokesmen say South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu did not commit enough troops for the operation, fearing an upsurge in political opposition in South Vietnam.

The Sun report continues:

"We went in with fewer troops than the enemy and counted on American planes to make up the difference," said an aide to Gen. Pham Van Phu, commander of the 1st Infantry Division which supplied more than half the incursion force.

"Candidly, I must say the Americans let us down," the aide said.

Aides to Gen. Cao Van Vien, chief of the South Vietnamese joint general staff, said he was angered by reports that Thieu bowed to political forces in the allegedly premature withdrawal of forces.

"What kind of cowards and liars are these Americans?" Vien asked.

Fourth Consecutive Day

Jordanians, Rebels Continue To Clash

From AP

Jordanian troops clashed with Palestinian Arab guerrillas for the fourth consecutive day Monday but King Hussein's government said it has restored order and that the guerrillas have ceased to be a military problem.

Jordanian Premier Wafsi Tell told parliament the army can wipe out the guerrillas everywhere in Jordan within a matter of hours but said the government intends no such thing.

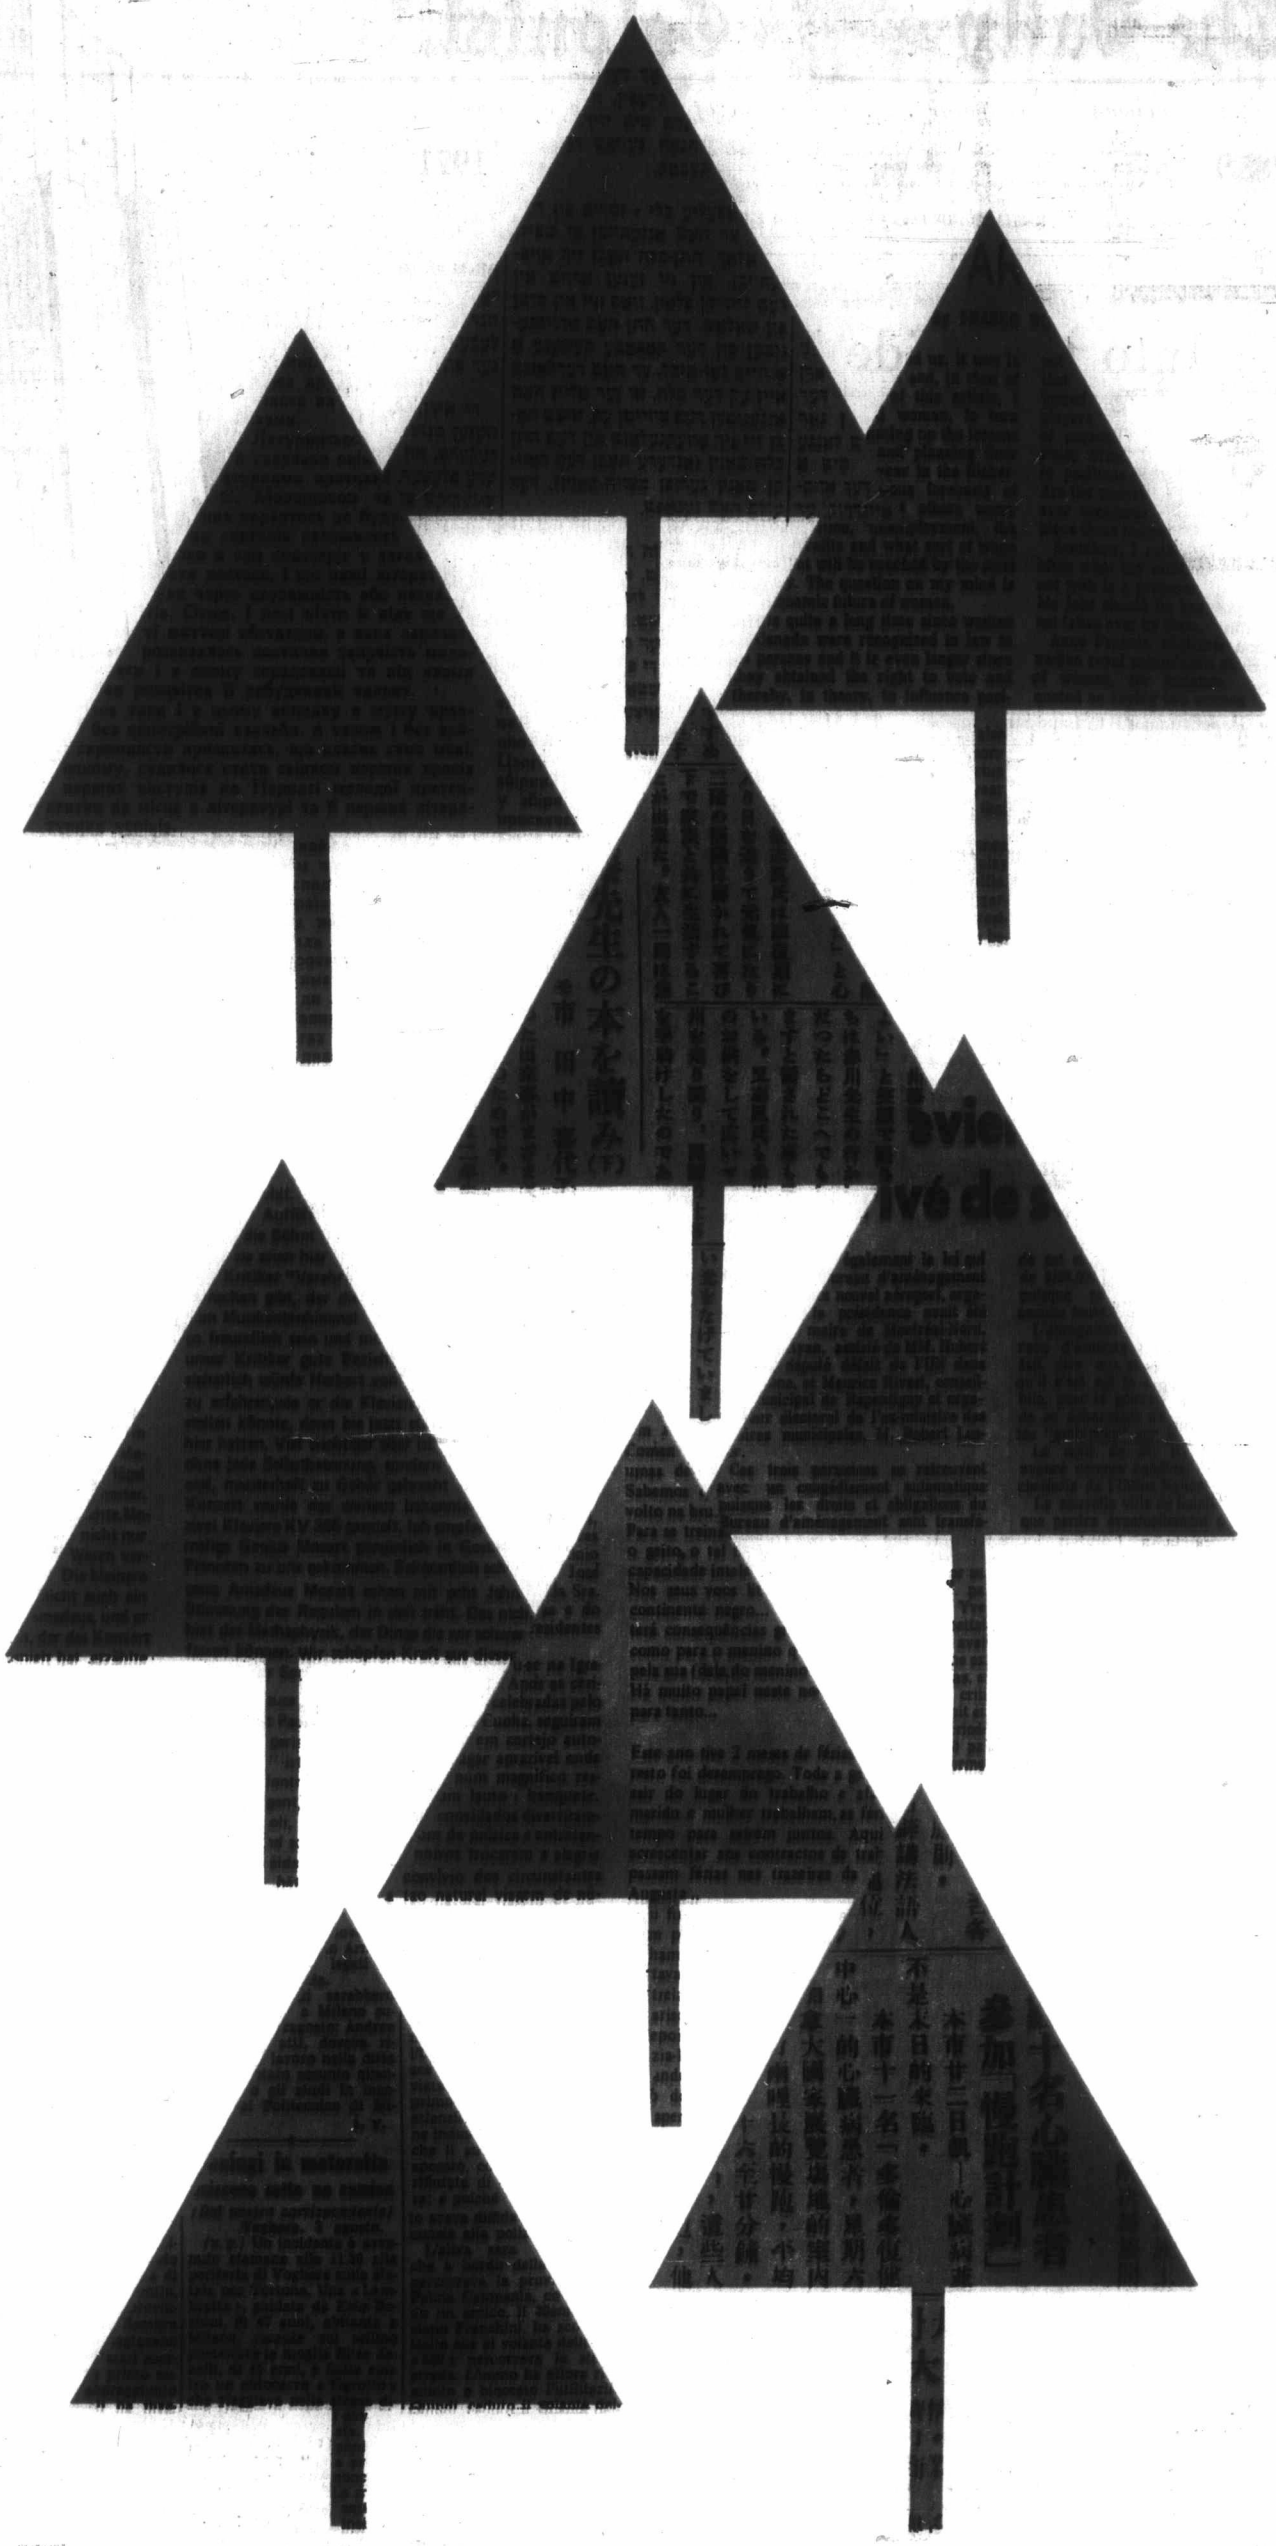

Guerrilla spokesmen in Cairo and Damascus, Syria, said Jordanian government troops are continuing an artillery attack on Irbid and said guerrilla and civilian casualties in Irbid and Amman, the capital, had risen to 200 killed and 400 wounded in the last three days.

Libyan leader Muammer Kadafi and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat charged that the Jordanian government provoked the violence as an excuse for eliminating the anti-Israel Palestinian movement.

Into the Wide Blue Yonder

THERE MAY BE SOME pieces of legislation that might not create too much confusion when enacted on a trial basis, but there are strong feelings that the intriguing Air Space Titles Bill is not one of them. It is now before the provincial legislature and professional people outside of the government service have asked that it be stood over for a year, at least, so that all of its technical details, and there are many of them, can be gone into fully.

Delaying action was requested of the legislative committee on municipal matters by a delegation representing the Association of Professional Engineers, the Canadian Bar Association, the Real Estate Institute of B.C., the Vancouver Board of Trade, the Architectural Institute of B.C. and the Corporation of B.C. Land Surveyors.

The legislation was written by experts within the civil service who want it on the statute books immediately so that some experience in its administration can be gained without undue delay.

This could be taken as an indication that even the government is unsure of the ramifications of the Air Space Titles Bill. And although amendments can always be made to cover loopholes, in anything as complicated as this it would seem reasonable that the greatest care possible be taken to guard against leaks before launching.

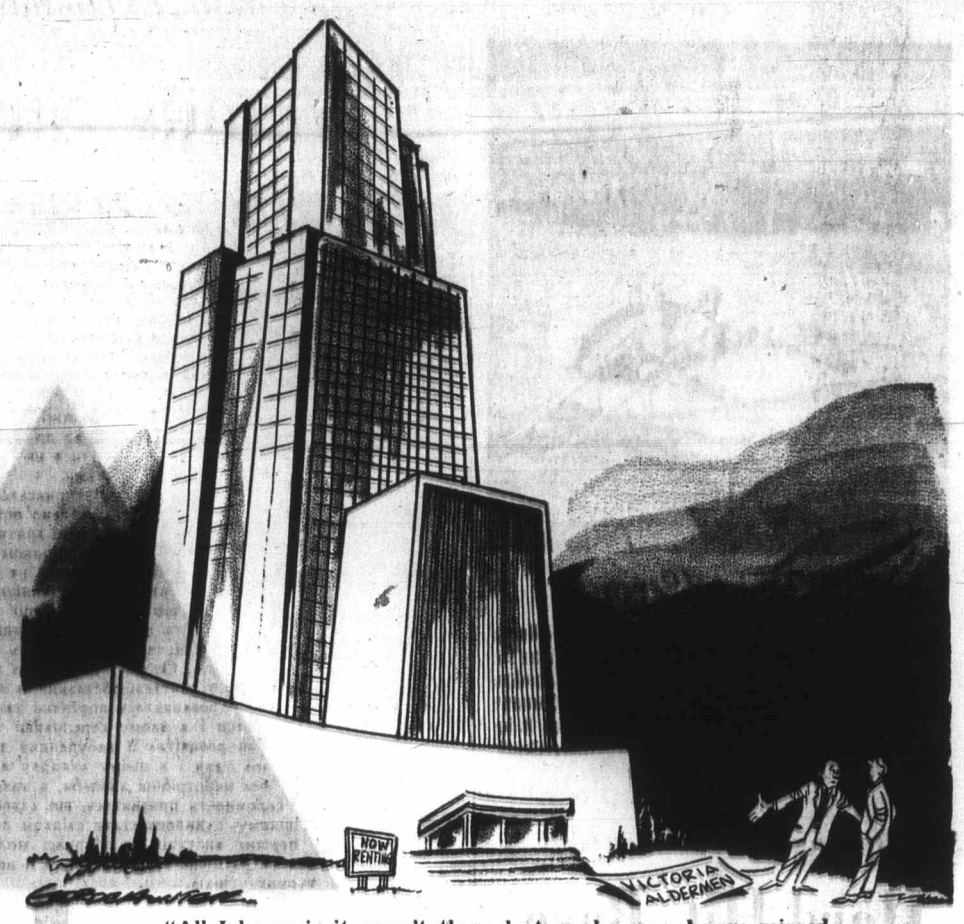

The professions represented in the delegation seeking delay in enactment apparently were not consulted in preparation of the legislation which, they say, is poorly explained.

People in private practice frequently see different sides to those that government experts view, and their knowledge and practical experience could be of great value in matters of this nature — no matter how well thought out they may have been by civil service professionals.

The Air Space Titles Bill appears to have come "from out of the blue" with no hints given prior to the legislative session that it was in the offing. This might lead some to wonder if it has been devised to cover a particular situation, especially so when outside consultation was not sought.

The statements in support of the new law by the lady member for Vancouver Little Mountain, Minister without Portfolio Grace McCarthy, might be taken as confirmation of such a suspicion. She defended the bill as "imaginative" and essential to orderly downtown growth of cities, providing greater revenue for metropolitan municipalities by broadening the tax base. Who is going to be hit by these increased levies?

But it is the complex detail of the bill that is worrying the technical experts in business who should have the ear of the government. Setting a pigeon loose and seeing how it flies is not good enough. It could come to grief if its feeding has been scant.

"All I know is it wasn't there last week — maybe we missed a secret council meeting."

In the Middle

IT IS NO SECRET that the refusal of the British government to order its Ulster-stationed troops to go into "enemy-occupied territory" in Belfast and re-establish law and order resulted in the resignation of the former Ulster prime minister, James Chichester-Clark.

Whether Prime Minister Edward Heath's decision was the best under the circumstances remains to be seen. However, it must be accepted that the British government acted on the advice of its senior military commanders in the Ulster battle-zone.

The reluctance of the British army to take stricter measures is understandable. One of the most telling arguments for its attitude is frequently used by its officers and NCOs in briefing their men on fire discipline in Northern Ireland: "Don't forget," they say, "what the other side would like more than anything else is a picture of a dead baby and two pregnant women shot by you to go winging round the world's news agencies . . ."

This, reports a London journalist, is the essence of the constantly misunderstood British army policy in containing the situation, even when the enemy is using firearms and explosive devices against it.

It is the crux of the different viewpoints being taken by understandably frightened and worried people who want a quick solution and the longer-term thinking of the British army. And this, it is claimed, is essentially the difference which led to the former prime minister's resignation.

The army's answer to the "get tougher" demands has consistently been that this is easier said than done. One officer was recently quoted as saying: "How much tougher can you get than to kill stone dead every IRA man who has actually appeared in a soldier's sights with a lethal weapon in his hand — be it submachine gun or a petrol bomb?"

This, in fact, is what has been happening during the past eight weeks. Although only about five bodies of terrorists have been recovered and identified, army marksmen have probably killed or wounded four to five times that number.

Under the rules an army marksman, who can see a great deal through the new Starscope sighting device which has thoroughly frightened IRA terrorists, is not allowed to fire at the men who emerge from the shadows to drag away dead or wounded either for secret burial or for illegal evacuation over the border to co-operative hospitals in the Irish Republic.

Though the precise rules about shooting terrorists have never been officially disclosed it is now generally understood that a soldier may shoot, in an extreme case, to save his own life or that of an innocent person, and may shoot an identifiable human target carrying a lethal weapon.

Just how strictly these rules have been applied may be judged from the fact that a Royal Marine involved in a riot last October when two youths were shot is now awaiting civil trial on the serious criminal charge of malicious wounding. This case should prove an interesting exercise in the workings of law and politics and offer a sharp test of the army's patience over the whole situation.

As has often been the ease in the past—while politicians bicker and dicker the soldier stands in the middle taking the bulk of the abuse.

It's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' chuck 'im out, the brute!

Ottawa Offbeat

The Promise Was More for Less

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

REMEMBER how it was?

And how, with a whole new information deal, it was supposed to be?

The way the federal government promised it — like wonderful, a whole new way of telling the federal government story the way it is?

You, who, as a taxpayer, along with all others who pay Ottawa's ever-soaring bills, already were shelling out just short of an annual $150 million for federal information service, were to get more for less.

* * *

On the honor of the PMO — the PMO being the Ottawa-Parliament Hill "call letters," so to speak, for that new super federal power station, the Prime Minister's Office, where a staff of close to 90 hand-picked Trudeau Terrifics, as they're known by some, are busy planning that Just Society for something over an annual $1,000,000 salarywise.

Not much, you say, working out at an average $10,000 which, in the upper echelons of the federal civil service, is pretty poor pickings indeed.

But remember a goodly portion of those 90 Trudeau Terrifics are secretaries, even stenographers, and they bring down the average.

* * *

All of which is intended to establish, in case you were wondering, that nowhere in this national capital, where both the Royal Mint and the federal treasury do business, can you get such an 18-carat solid gold guarantee of anything as from the PMO.

You'll recall that when the Prime Minister's Task Force on Government Information filed its report, this paragraph came through loud and clear above all others:

"The government of Canada is spending as much as $148 million on information — more than two and a half times the entire budget for the Department of External Affairs — with results impossible to measure."

* * *

Not only were the returns on this investment uncertain, went on the Task Force putting the wood to the federal information services — every department, board, bureau, commission and federal agency has its own private pool of publicists — but far to much has been invested.

A much better job could be done far more cheaply.

And so, the way the Task Force told it:

"All information progams and activities lacking an accepted high priority in relation to government policies should be dropped or drastically curtailed."

There was to be a paring of the publicity programs and payrolls.

It could be done, explained the Task Force, by setting up a hot new professional publicity and public relations apparatus to be called "Information Canada."

But how?

Simple.

Information Canada would "re-organize and co-ordinate," so read the blue-print, wiping out duplication and waste, and cutting costs while providing an entirely new streamlined range of government news services.

Sounded promising, especially the prospect of paring duplication, waste and cost, since, as any Ottawa hand, old or new, has to be aware of how tons of press releases, departmental puffery, cabinet ministerial butter-up blurbs and federal flackery goes into waste-baskets all over town and into the waste re-cycling machines of the Florence Paper Company.

It would take only a modest investment for Information Canada to set up shop, promised the PMO's Task Force. Nothing eleborate. Only a simple information service. Straight stuff. Just the facts, Ma'm.

* * *

Might even recover the investment, perhaps with a penny of profit or two "through the savings resulting from the rationalization of existing information services."

That's what it said.

It all looked so good and sounded so convincing.

And it was less than two years ago.

So what happens?

What else?

The cost of government information — like the price tag on any federal service — has gone up and up and up.

Those "existing information staffs" in every federal department, board, bureau, commission and agency that were, as the Task Force promised you, to be "rationalized" by the cutting of duplication, waste, personnel and payroll, increased from some 900 to better than 1,000 with total salaries up from around $8,500,000 to better than $9,200,000.

And Information Canada?

Going great informational guns with a staff at 381 on a payroll of nearly $3,000,000 and both growing.

Excluded from these totals are the number and cost of certain individuals "on contract" in the capital to Information Canada.

Nor do the figures include — the answers are still to come — what it's costing the federal government in addition for informational services "contracted out" to big-time public relations and flack factories in Toronto and Montreal.

Statistics Clouding Real Issues

By LUBOR J. ZINK, Toronto Telegram News Service

THE OPPOSITION parties and the Canadian Labor Congress blast the government for not doing enough to stimulate economic recovery. Bank of Canada Governor Louis Rasminsky warns that too much stimulation would rekindle the fires of inflation. The government maintains it is doing exactly what is needed to reduce unemployment without setting off a new tidal wave of inflationary pressures.

* * *

Who is right?

Nobody really knows. Economic experts are just as divided in their views, assumptions, assessments and projections as the politicians, the CLC, and the Bank of Canada governor. Since most of the indices come from the same source — the Dominion Bureau of Statistics — their use for scoring points in the controversy depends on how they are selected, grouped together and interpreted.

In some instances, the whole argument rests on no more than different interpretations of identical statistics.

For example, both the government and its critics use the same sets of unemployment figures, for there is no other source of data in this field than the DBS.

The latest DBS figures show an increase of 7,000 in the number of unemployed in terprets it as an unmistakable February over the previous month. The government in-sign of improvement in the performance of the economy.

The opposition parties and the CLC cite it as a proof that unemployment continues to rise.

Both these interpretations are defensible.

Since the rise in unemployment from January to February a year ago was considerably higher (41,000), the government can argue that the economic outlook is improving and that the improvement, which it expects to pick up momentum during spring and summer, is the direct result of last year's changes in monetary, fiscal and public spending policies.

The opposition can and does argue that since the total unemployment figure in January, 1971, was considerably higher than a year ago, the drop in the rate of increase cannot be regarded as an improvement, let alone as a sign of economic recovery, for the army of jobless is enormous (675,000, an increase of 149,000 in the past 12 months). And it continues to grow. Furthermore, the so-called hard core of unemployment (persons unable to find work for four months or longer) has jumped from 34 per cent of the total last February to 43 per cent. Therefore, the problem is getting worse, both quantitatively and qualitatively, and additional steps should be taken immediately, particularly in the form of tax reductions, to improve the situation.

* * *

The government counters by charging the opposition and the CLC with irresponsibility and cheap demagoguery. It maintains that economic recovery is a long-term process. It would be undermined by such short-term palliatives as tax cuts which would be bound to generate new inflationary pressures necessitating re-tightening of the monetary and fiscal crews. The result would be reversal of the upswing in economic activity the government says is already underway.

To document the alleged beginning of economic revival the government uses seasonally-adjusted unemployment figures which show a decline from 6.8 per cent last fall to 6.2 per cent in January and February.

* * *

The opposition dismisses the seasonally-adjusted figures as a hoax (Robert Stanfield put it vividly when he said that the government could also use seasonally-adjusted temperatures to prove that our winters are mild) and accused the administration of deliberately confusing the issue which it defines as mismanagement of the economy.

This, to my mind, rather than arguments over contradictory interpretations of adjusted and unadjusted statistics, is the crux of the controversy.

What really matters is whether or not the government had done the right thing when it set out to fight what is diagnosed as demand inflation with policies designed to slow down the economy. For as long as the answer to this basic question is disputed, there can be no hope of economic recovery, because no clear-cut positive course can be pursued in an atmosphere of uncertainty and acrimony.

This is obvious from the Bank of Canada governor's annual report to Parliament, which is more a rationalization of the monetary and fiscal policies that were used until last spring for fighting inflation than an analysis and projection of the economic forces at work at home and abroad.

Instead of offering an objective examination of the cause of the existing problems, the report seeks to corroborate the government's contention that there were no mistakes in the anti-inflation policies, that the subsequent monetary and fiscal relaxation came at the right time and in correct doses, and that all we can do now is wait for the long-term effects of those absolutely correct, though contradictory measures.

Such an attitude makes a rational examination of the problems well nigh impossible and rules out correction of mistakes a more open-minded approach might unearth.

* * *

Partisan haggling over the interpretation of statistics won't do any good to anybody. It merely confuses the basic issue of the causes of the obvious malfunction of the economy.

Japan Keeps Quiet About Attack on Emperor

By MARK MURRAY from Tokyo

A ROW HAS BLOWN UP in Tokyo over the Japanese mass media's attitude to a vitriolic attack by Communist China on Emperor Hirohito. All reports of the attack and reply to it — were suppressed by Japan's newspapers, radio and TV outlets and magazines with the exception of one small-circulation, English-language daily.

The incident demonstrates the sensitive atmosphere that surrounds the Imperial House in Japan. The Emperor is no longer regarded as a deity but is still seen by many Japanese as something more than the symbol of the state, the post which the post-war constitution accords Hirohito.

* * *

It was because the Japanese cabinet did not want to involve the Emperor in the indignity of a propaganda slanging match that it chose not to reply to the original Chinese attack. But the government has come under fire from a member of Parliament belonging to the ruling Liberal Democratic Party.

Mr. Heihachiro Otake, a right-wing member of the party and a member of Parliament's Upper House, declared at a meeting of the party's executive council that the New China News Agency, Peking's official mouthpiece, had insulted the Emperor in an unpardonable fashion. He said it was greatly to be regretted that neither the Japanese press nor the government had mentioned the attack or replied to it.

His secretary told me later that Mr. Otake felt equally strong about the suppression of his own statement. The only mention it had received was a bare four paragraphs in the middle of a story which was published in the Japan Times, an English-language daily which circulates largely among the foreign community in Tokyo.

Japanese newspapermen deny that they were directed by the government not to publish the story, but clearly some sort of voluntary censorship system, formal or informal, is at work.

Mr. Otake wants the reports published because he feels they will help discredit moves by more liberal elements in his party to normalize relations between Japan and China. The attack by the New China News Agency, he says, should not be tolerated by Japan.

The NCNA report declared that the Emperor and Empress were being used as "living advertisements" for reviving militarism. It said Hirohito was a "number one hangman, whose hands are stained with the blood of the people of Japan and of Asja" and a proven war criminal.

* * *

While the story has not been published in Japan it is a common topic of gossip among government officials and diplomats. And it has angered many conservative Japanese who cannot reconcile themselves to the reduced status of their formerly divine ruler.

Food Shortage, Overpopulation, Exploitation, Pollution Hit Subtropical Paradise

Remote Islands Suffer All Ills of Civilization

By ROBERT S. ELEGANT

The Cook Islands are about as far as you can get from anywhere and still be somewhere. Scattered in the South Pacific 1,000 to 1,500 miles from New Zealand, they became one of the world's smallest independent territories in 1965.

They should be a sated, subtropical paradise. But some 22,000 inhabitants of their 99 square miles, separated by broad ocean stretches, recently found themselves facing an acute shortage of food. Over-population, excessive exploitation and pollution had destroyed the reefs protecting lovely lagoons as breeding places for marine life.

The government sent for a specialist. President Taylor A. Pryor of the Oceanic Foundation of Makapuu, Hawaii, has flown to the Cook Islands to design an "aquafarm." Hhe says confidently: "The malnutrition . . . can be eliminated quickly with new techniques."

The Cook Islands are small, their problems readily manageable. But the phenomenon of man's rapacity and intemperance creating an acute nutritional problem amid the sea's bounty highlights similar problems elsewhere.

Those problems are much more acute and much less susceptible to immediate solution with the resources now available.

Nigeria in West Africa, with a population of 60 millions, has a "screaming need" for protein, as a UN official phrased it.

The tsetse fly, spreading sleeping sickness among cattle, makes the country rely on imported red meat which is prohibitively expensive. Latin America and southern Asia also suffer acute protein deficiencies which could be solved by intelligent utilization of marine resources.

Unfortunately, the present trend is toward exploitation even more ruthless than that which despoiled the Cook Islands. Soviet fishing vessels literally sweep the sea bottom, removing all forms of life to shatter the ecological balance.

Japanese and east European fishermen use similar practices, though somewhat less recklessly. Almost unrestrained, the Russians take not only young or breeding fish, but smaller organisms which feed the fish.

The State of Washington calculates that devoting half the shallow sound to similar aquaculture would produce six billion pounds of seafood annually, the present total U.S. catch.

Taiwan and Indonesia produce much needed sea protein in traditional milkfish "farm ponds." Elsewhere, natural replenishment by currents stirring up nutrients from the depths provides apparently inexhaustible runs of fish — as in Peru's abundant anchovy fishery.

Some 140,000 additional square miles in Asia could readily be given over to milkfish husbandry. At Taiwan's lower rate of 520 tons a square mile, such cultivation would produce more than today's total world catch from all sources. (Indonesia already produces 1,300 tons a square mile.)

But exploitation of the sea generally follows the same reckless, greedy and unscientific manner which has spoiled so much land.

It is, nonetheless, a truism that protein, readily available from sea life, is essential to improving the physical and intellectual quality of the children of underdeveloped areas; also by the year 2000, man must harvest the sea simply to feed the expanded human race.

Truly international cooperation would require small investments, while yielding enormous dividends. Using the sea could reverse pollution and provide employment.

The sea could also bestow greater understanding of our world. Man's knowledge of the depths and their life cycles is rudimentary.

Such a program would not merely serve national purposes, it would help prevent mankind's becoming irretrievably divided between grossly underprivileged and blatantly overprivileged.

Even if humanity could survive two-thirds malnourished, the fortunate nations cannot possibly survive amid nearly universal misery. All our interests therefore demand an imaginative initiative.

Insecticides Kill Kenya's Wildlife

LAT, from Nairobi, Kenya

Pollution hardly seems like a problem in a spacious, agricultural, developing country like Kenya, which is only on the threshold of industrialization.

But experts say that wastes are threatening to destroy Kenya's best-known game park and bird sanctuary.

The biggest problem seems to be at Lake Nakuru, where hundreds of thousands of Flamingoes ring the waters in an eerie pink hue. Perez Olindo, the director of Kenya National Parks, has found bloated bodies of pelicans floating on the lake and fears the flamingoes may be next.

Olindo believes that the pollution is caused by untreated sewage dumped into the lake and insecticides that flow down in streams feeding the lake.

"What happens," he says, "is that lorry (truck) drivers often wash down their vehicles in streams — after delivering tons of insecticides to farms.

"One of the things which really makes me angry is the attitude of governments like Britain and America. "They're quite unconcerned that their chemical firms export pesticides and sprays to our countries even though they've banned their use on home ground."

In Nairobi, Richard Leakey, the director of the Kenya National Museum, has warned that air pollution could turn the Nairobi National Park into "a barren wasteland in the near future, devoid of its exotic fauna and flora."

They Get Along Fine But 'Marriage' Is Out

By CHRISTOPHER BECK

From Canberra

Ever since the islands of New Zealand were administered from Australia, 1,200 miles across the Tasman Sea, there has been talk of union between the two most developed nations of Oceania.

In most cases, in the years since the early 1800s, the talk has been little more than intellectual hypothesising. Yet today — although federation appears as remote as ever — union between Australia and New Zealand has a new validity.

This has been brought about by several traditional factors, but a new and forceful catalyst has emerged: the reality that New Zealand will undergo an economic trauma when Britain finally enters the European Common Market.

The grounds for some sort of integration seem logical at first glance. Both are English-speaking nations, the population of each is of predominantly British descent, their party political structures are broadly similar and there is a high degree of commonality in their overall social systems.

Australians tend to be overtly paternalistic toward New Zealanders: they regard them as first class dairy farmers who have not yet come to grips with the basic problems of industrialised society.

Perhaps more importantly, Australians dislike and are highly suspicious of what they see as an ethnic assertion that New Zealanders are more British than the British (a fair observation, since New Zealand has a more selective immigration policy).

But if many Australians say New Zealand is "a nice place for a holiday, but I wouldn't want to live there," the feeling all too often is mutual.

Many New Zealanders getting off planes at Sydney or Melbourne airports for the first time are awakened abruptly by the veneer of Americana, the comparative brashness, the high pressure of life. Australian hedonism often affronts a transported heritage of British sensibilities.

It is this atmosphere which partially clouds the issue. When this fog is blown away it is clear the arguments for union have considerably more weight than those against it.

Trade is a good instance. Currently Australia sells goods worth just over A$200 million (about U.S. $175 million) annually to New Zealand, which in turn sends A$86 million worth of goods to Australia.

Despite the New Zealand-Australia Free Trade Agreement, which is supposed to reduce trade barriers between the two, the balance is swinging more in Australia's favor every year.

This, coupled with the fact that in many areas the New Zealand and Australian economies dovetail, has triggered a belief that there should be a wider-ranging economic relationship, such as that within the Common Market.

The biggest impediment — in Australia, at least — is a wall of tariffs around manufacturing industries, and the political realities of Australia's conservative federal government.

One benefit of a closer union would be the possible merger of Australia's highly sophisticated defence forces with the small but tough New Zealand military. In theory, a merger of the countries' armies, air forces and navies should be cheaper to maintain, and arms could of course be standardised.

This has special relevance to Australia's and New Zealand's friends to the north, notably Malaysia and Singapore.

New Zealand and Australian foreign policies are similar, and the recent change of leadership in Canberra is unlikely to result in seriously incompatible viewpoints.

But New Zealand still has a special relationship with Britain, the main export market for its primary products. In Australia's case, the trade giant is the United States.

The most crucial and difficult problem of all is that of setting up a joint consultative or governing body to explore areas in which both countries could co-operate while recognizing the existence of major differences.

It would be impossible to integrate fully the parliaments of the two: New Zealand has one house of parliament with 84 members while Australia has a bicameral legislature of 185 members, and six state parliaments with at least another 400 members.

Most people on both sides of the Tasman Sea agree any move toward tighter union is far away. But they agree, too, that the chance of increased prosperity may one day speak louder than sentiment.

"We were relying on you to hold our marriage together."

Authoritative Opinion:

The Soviet Union Not Expansionist

By JOHN LeBLANC, from London

A military study group casts doubt on the idea that the Soviet Union is engaged upon territorial expansion.

This conclusion is reached by the Institute for Strategic Studies, an independently-financed international centre based here for the study of defence and world security. Its "Strategic Survey 1970" was made public Monday. Former Canadian prime minister Lester B. Pearson is president of the institute, which has a 45-country membership.

"Soviet naval activity reached new heights during 1970 . . .," says an official summary of the report. "The general impression was that the Soviet Union, provided for the first time with an effective long-range navy, was expanding its political influence at relatively low cost in and around the Middle East and the Indian Ocean." But it adds:

"Despite Soviet naval activity and the heavy Soviet commitment to the United Arab Republic Egypt, there is as much reason to doubt the proposition that the Soviet Union is determinedly expansionist as to question the complementary assumption that the United States is hell-bent upon withdrawing from the world.

"The Soviet Union has increased its military strength and has sometimes, as in the case of Cuba, been prepared to take political risks in testing American will. But it has also behaved with relative caution in such areas as Europe, Africa and Asia.

"Meanwhile, although the Nixon doctrine implies a tendency to limit commitments, the U.S. remains deeply involved in all the major areas of the world and shows no real taste for an anachronistic isolationism."

Examining the value of various deterrent weapons, the report says that importance is switching to the submarine-carried ballistic missiles.

"It is increasingly obvious," it states, "that fixed land-based intercontinental ballistics missiles face obsolescence and that more attention must shift to deterrence based on submarine-launched strategic missiles."

As this develops, the survey adds, the techniques of anti-submarine warfare will become critical. But it concludes, after a survey of sea war techniques, that "there is no reason to expect that anti-submarine warfare can destroy the credibility of deterrence founded upon the ballistic-missile submarine."

Dealing with China, the survey says its launching of space satellites has made it more apparent that this country, already a great conventional military power, must become a more important factor in the strategic nuclear equation. Chinese attitudes may have an important effect in shaping Japanese defence policy — and Japan has the ability to develop nuclear forces.

The institute, analysing the effect of economic factors on military events, says: "The international dangers of economic conflict are demonstrated by the way in which economic nationalism and competing commercial protectionism threaten relations between Western Europe, Japan and the United States.

"But internal pressures may also affect security. Inflation has changed the balance of Western defence budgets and, in France and West Germany, the rapid rise of operational and manpower costs has resulted in the severe reduction of capital investment in weapons and other equipment.

"The French nuclear weapons program has been heavily hit by cost increases. Development cost of strategic missiles already exceeds estimates by 75 per cent and France will be unable, at best, to keep more than one missile submarine on patrol until after 1975."

Too Much Recruit, Not Enough Kilt

Greater Victoria militia personnel are getting ready for summer training program and obviously meeting some problems. Regimental Quartermaster Sergeant Doug Doidge of Canadian Scottish (Princess Mary's) checks hem of kilt, which regulations say must be exactly two inches above knee when knee is bent, only to find there's about half-inch too much of recruit showing. So kilt must be lengthened. Applications for Canadian Scottish training program are being taken Tuesday and Thursday nights at Bay Street armory.—(William E. John)

House Unanimous, Some Misgivings

Tobacco Ad Ban Supported

The Legislature gave unanimous approval Monday night to the principle of a bill to ban all forms of tobacco advertising in B.C.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, outlining the government's thinking, said the bill is designed to reduce the intensity of propaganda which is becoming more extensive every day in all media.

He added the government is making no attempt to dictate whether people should or should not smoke or sell tobacco products.

The bill is intended to come into effect Sept. 1.

Peterson told the house the government expects tobacco manufacturers to respect the law when it comes into force because only in this way could the companies retain the respect and goodwill of the people of B.C.

'Second Mile'

He also called on MLAs who smoke to "go the second mile" and kick the tobacco habit.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said he challenged the tobacco industry to contribute the same amount as it now spends on advertising toward medical research and "counter-smoking commercials."

He added: "This is a small step against hucksterism which is pushing products on young people which we all know don't do them any good."

Garde Gardom (L—Point Grey), who introduced a private member's bill to ban tobacco advertising earlier this session, suggested the government go further now.

U.K. Example

There was applause from Socred backbenchers when Gardom said B.C. should follow the example of the United Kingdom by requiring a message in each package of cigarettes warning they contain tars and nicotines which could be harmful to health.

Robert Strachan (NDP—Cowichan Malahat) said he also favored the move, adding the only sector of the economy likely to be seriously affected was the newspapers. He added: "Looking at the last financial report of Pacific Press, it won't bankrupt them."

Herb Bruch, noting that the glamor of smoking would still be pushed through magazines, said he hoped B.C.'s example would be followed by other provinces and Ottawa until a complete ban came into effect on tobacco advertising in Canada.

'Motherhood'

Minister without Portfolio Pat Jordan said voting for the anti-tobacco advertising bill was like voting for motherhood. "I'm for motherhood so I'm voting for this bill," she said.

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said tobacco companies should have been prosecuted long ago for "false, deceptive, fatal advertising." He added relatives of those who died from lung cancer and other respiratory diseases connected with smoking should also have sued for damages.

Bert Price (SC—Burrard) said reduction in use of tobacco should be obvious within two years of introduction of the legislation this fall, and be halved within five years.

Wasn't Enough

Howard McDiarmid (SC—Alberni) said it wasn't enough to ban tobacco advertising. There should also be, he added, "positive, vigorous and sophisticated" advertising about how harmful smoking is.

Leo Nimsick (NDP—Kootenay) said the government was trying to look virtuous in full knowledge that the proposed legislation would have no effect unless it carried heavy penalties on the tobacco companies who broke the new law.

Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) said he favored the bill but added it was an attack on advertising and wondered if it would prove to be "a serious, drastic mistake." He said marijuana use was soaring without ads and added advertising had been responsible for the development of filters and asked what would happen if ads were responsible tomorrow for a "100-per-cent safe" filter?

Premier Bennett said he believed Capozzi's argument was based upon "an erroneous impression" because the pushing force of advertising was the most powerful in the world.

Not too long ago, the premier said, few women smoked. But the image created by advertising that smoking was socially acceptable changed all that. He added: "That's the power of advertising and that's the reason why I'm supporting this bill."

Barrie Clark (L—North Vancouver-Seymour) said he had been connected with the advertising industry for 20 years and found it accurately reflected the standards of society.

Other Methods

He warned, however, the multi-billion-dollar tobacco industry wasn't going to take "this sort of thing" lying down and in both the U.S. and B.C. other methods would be found of pushing tobacco products.

The Liberal member urged the provincial government to use caution in the literal application of the bill saying that Ottawa planned to ban radio and television tobacco ads this fall. But he added the tobacco and advertising firms would respect the law.

I.Q. of 145 and Can't Remember?

A noted publisher in Chicago reports there is a simple technique for acquiring a powerful memory which can pay you real dividends in both business and social advancement and works like magic to give you added poise, necessary self-confidence and greater popularity.

According to this publisher, many people do not realize how much they could influence others simply by remembering accurately everything they see, hear, or read. Whether in business, at social functions or even in casual conversations with new acquaintances, there are ways in which you can dominate each situation by your ability to remember.

To acquaint the readers of this paper with the easy-to-follow rules for developing skill in remembering anything you choose to remember, the publishers have printed full details of their self-training method in a new booklet, "Adventures in Memory", which will be mailed free to anyone who requests it. No obligation. Send your name, address, and zip code to: Memory Studies, 835 Diversey Pkwy., Dept. C133, Chicago, Ill. 60614. A postcard will do.

Health Costs Queried

Greater Victoria school board Monday night decided to get a firm statement from metropolitan health board authorities on the cost of providing "ideal" health services to the students.

If they can get the same services at lower cost by other means, school trustees indicated their agreement with the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health would be in jeopardy.

The "ideal" health services for the school system, according to data collected by trustee Dr. Philip Ney and district superintendent A. J. Longmore, would cost $370,000 a year.

Such a service would include two full-time doctors, 15 full-time nurses, a psychiatrist and other para-medical and clerical workers. In the past, the school board has said that the local public health service's school program is inadequate.

At a special school board meeting Monday night, Ney said the preliminary study of school health costs indicates it is "almost feasible to provide ideal service with money now available."

He pointed out that funds from many sources that the school board can apply to health programs total $354,757.

"However, the Public School Act says if we can obtain a public health service it must be from an existing agency."

Trustee Dr. Donald Shorting said the health board's financing problems have their root in the need for regionalization of the service.

"There has been so much waffling on regionalization — I am hearing the same stories I heard four years ago," added Shorting.

Ney said the Vancouver school system illustrates what can be expected from a local public health service and this does not compare with what is available through the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

"We owe it to the students and to the community to provide the best care," said Ney.

Trustees unanimously adopted a motion that a letter go to the health board asking for a firm cost quotation of the services it considers necessary for an ideal school health program.

Mine Bill Motion Termed Sloppy

By NANCY BROWN

Mines Minister Frank Richter made a sloppy presentation without knowing the details behind a bill he has introduced into the Legislature, Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said Monday.

The bill would have reinstated mineral claims to Sunshine Comstock Mines Ltd., a company that has been under investigation by the attorney-general's office for several years.

George S. Groves Sr. and his son George Jr., of New York, have been charged with theft of $49,000 worth of securities from the company. The claims reverted to the government for non-payment of taxes while Groves was under investigation, Barrett said.

Richter said it was through no fault of the shareholders that the claims were forfeited. Taxes on the claims were not paid by officers of the company, he said, although they were in a position to do so.

Since that time one of the principals has passed away in New York. The son of the principal is not connected with these claims in any way," said Richter.

"Since that time the attorney-general has dropped charges against the principal and this bill would give security to the shareholders in relation to their mineral claims."

Richter said the bill would not be proclaimed until certain provisions had been met, and until things were cleared up between the attorney-general's office and the company.

"I have information which contradicts the minister's information," said Barrett.

He said that the last company report filed in 1965 showed that the principal of the company who was charged for "attempting to bleed this particular company" was not the man who had died, but his son, George S. Groves, Jr.

Citizen Anomaly Detected in Bill

There is an anomaly in a bill which says that only Canadian citizens will be allowed to administer laws which are enacted by legislators upon whom there are no such restrictions, Howard McDiarmid (SC-Alberni) told the house Monday.

The bill, given second reading, amended the Legal Profession Act on three fronts — it's disciplinary procedures, necessary credentials, and the insurance program operated by the law society.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said there was general agreement throughout the Commonwealth on the need for dropping the sections which say that lawyers should be either citizens or British subjects, by insisting on citizenship.

He pointed out that some Commonwealth members are now republics without allegiance to the Queen. Many of them require citizenship as a requirement of the bar.

Herb Capozzi, (SC—Vancouver Centre) said he felt the bill was a great step forward and said he hoped to see such provisions incorporated at a later date into the Elections Act and the Municipal Act.

Opposition members said, however, that it would be a waste to have people trained in what is essentially Canadian law come into the province and have to wait five years to practise. They said that it is already mandatory that such lawyers take a year of Canadian law at UBC before practising.

"The idea that these people have to wait five years is absolutely ridiculous," said Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby-Edmonds). "Redraft this so that these people have to show their intention of becoming Canadian citizens as soon as possible."

Mobile Homeowners Should Pay Taxes

Mobile home owners should pay property tax — and receive the homeowner's grant — opposition members told Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell in the house Monday.

The comments came during second reading of amendments to the Mobile Homes Act which will change the fees paid by mobile home park owners, to the government.

According to opposition members the mobile homeowners are being, in effect, taxed through the fee which the operators regain in rent.

Robert Strachan, (NDP — Cowichan-Malahat) said the government had failed to give municipalities the power to tax mobile homes at value, because once this happened the owners would be eligible for the homeowner grant.

Because of the value of most of the mobile homes, taxes would not exceed the amount of the grant, so that in most cases such legislation would amount to a direct transfer of the grant amount from the provincial government to the municipalities, he said.

If the municipalities were permitted to tax the mobile homes, said Strachan, he felt they would be more willing to accept them into their areas.

Campbell did not comment on the taxation issue, but he did say he would like to see municipalities and regional districts do a better job of regulating the parks.

In his travels through the province he had seen many he could only describe as a mess, he said.

He also suggested that quite apart from the issue of mobile home parks where a homeowner pays rent to park, municipalities should also consider zoning for subdivisions where the owners of mobile homes could buy the land and place their homes. The bill was given second reading.

Mystery Blaze Second in Hours

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Atlantic City's second mysterious fire in 12 hours destroyed a commercial fishing pier and at least five waterfront buildings, including an abandoned old hotel, following a series of explosions early Monday. There were no injuries reported.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

New Africa In Dixie

BOLTON, Miss. (UPI) — Armed sentries patrolled 20 leased acres of pasture in western Mississippi Sunday while 150 members of a black separatist group established the capital of the Republic of New Africa.

"Our whole plan is to establish our own nation. The U.S. government can continue to exist," said Amari Obadele of New Orleans, the group's leader.

'Red Family' May Rule In Berkeley

BERKELEY, Calif. — On April 6 Berkeley voters will cast ballots in an election which could result in the takeover of city government by a coalition led by a group of radicals known as the "Red Family."

A loose-knit but powerful group called the "April coalition" has linked students, blacks and liberal Democrats with the red family commune in an effort to gain a majority on the city council.

Another aim of the coalition is to break up the Berkeley police department into three independent agencies — one of the black community, a second for the whites and a third for the University of California area.

Lawyer's Body Found?

Bald Girls Protest

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Young women followers of Charles Manson keeping vigil outside the courthouse threatened Monday to immolate themselves with gasoline if the convicted killer gets the death penalty for the Tate-Labianca murders.

The sensational murder trial had another macabre twist as word was received that the decomposed body of a large man, believed to be missing defence lawyer Ronald Hughes, had been discovered in a rugged mountain area 100 miles north of Los Angeles.

Hughes vanished last Thanksgiving weekend after going to the Sespe hot springs area on a camping trip.

As the jury went through a second day of deliberation on punishment for Manson and three female co-defendants, four other women members of the "family" knelt on a street corner outside the Hall of Justice with heads shaven absolutely bald.

Four Manson girls in bald protest

One of them, Sandra Good, said they were trying to draw world attention to "an innocent man" facing possible execution in the San Quentin Prison gas chamber.

"If it takes dousing ourselves with gasoline and igniting ourselves, we will do it," she said.

The three women defendants — Susan Atkins, Patricia Krenwinkel and Leslie Van Houten — were reported by matrons to have cut their waist length tresses very short, too, although not bald.

Two fishermen who backpacked down a steep gorge in the Los Padres National Forest at the weekend discovered what was believed to be the body of the 250-pound, red-bearded Ronald Hughes.

One of the man's arms had been severed. The body had been apparently swept several miles down the swift creek and the arm could have been torn loose then. Torrential rains swept the Sespe hot springs area over the Thanksgiving weekend.

Sheriff's deputies said the terrain and fog was such that it might not be possible to bring out the body until today.

Ottawa Protests

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada has told the United States it will hold the U.S. government responsible for any damage by the planned continuation of nuclear testing in the Aleutian Islands off Alaska, it was disclosed Monday.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp submitted to Parliament a summary of a formal Canadian diplomatic note protesting the tests. He said U.S. authorities "indicated their appreciation" of the Canadian position.

The convalescent heart patient won $160,000 on a Sweepstake ticket. Everyone knew of it but were afraid to tell him the happy news because of his condition. Finally they decided to get the Minister to impart the good news, fully expecting the patient to drop dead on hearing of his luck. The Minister tackled the situation cleverly.

"Dougal," he said, "what would you do if you won the top $160,000 prize in the Sweepstake?"

And the Minister dropped dead.

Oil Firm Sees Better Future

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

Improved production from British Columbia oil wells is reported by Western Pacific Products and Crude Oil Pipelines Ltd., which brings B.C. crude to market through its pipeline from Taylor near Fort St. John to Kamloops, where it links with Trans Mountain.

In its annual report, Western Pacific says output from B.C. wells sank to the lowest in nearly two years at 55,600 barrels a day last December, and the 1970 average was down 1.2 per cent from 1969.

The cause was unexpected operating difficulties in various fields, but Western Pacific says these have been largely overcome and the flow has increased currently to an average of more than 64,000 barrels a day.

Despite this a net profit of $2,515,334 (38 cents a share) representing an increase of 15 per cent from $2,222,148 (33 cents) was recorded over the previous year. This was due to an extraordinary income item of $315,334 after tax from sale of properties in the Canadian Arctic.

Western Pacific also said the increase in the value of the Canadian dollar had also helped the earnings picture as a large part of its long-term debt, both interest and principal, is payable in the less valuable U.S. dollars.

Boom in Sales

An increase of 72 per cent in sales is announced by Fields Stores Ltd., which operates 23 retail outlets in various parts of British Columbia.

Joe Segal, president and biggest shareholder of the Vancouver based clothing and department store chain, claimed it an extraordinary performance in the light of generally adverse conditions in the merchandising industry.

Net earnings were $1,233,970 (55 cents a share) against $879,729 (43 cents) in 1969, when there were fewer common shares outstanding Working capital increased from $4,438,337 to $5,308,110.

New undertaking for 1970 is a Pant Shop project, with the first of these stores due to open in April.

Segal says pant shops will sell men and women pant shirts and pant tops, and because of their nature, a high volume of goods can be displayed and sold in small sales area.

Credit Count

Banks that jumped into the credit card business in the past few years are getting to the stage of being able to count the cost.

In the United States, where bank credit cards were instituted earlier than in Canada, it has been found the losses on bank credit cards are rising sharply and are higher than the loss rate experienced on other types of consumer instalment credit made by the banks.

Why this should be so is not explained, but Andrew Brimmer, a member of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board, says the set charge off all federal reserve member banks in 1970 was 3.39 per cent, compared with 2.38 per cent a year earlier.

By contrast, banks' consumer loans have ranged between .25 per cent and .50 per cent.

Are bank credit cards making borrowing too easy and without providing sufficient control?

Georgia Strait

Central Del Rio, the oil and gas arm of Canadian Pacific Investments, says in its annual report for 1970 that "after careful consideration of public concern over protection of environment, it has given up rights to earn a large oil acreage block in Georgia Straits, and has decided to suspend drilling being undertaken in Lake Erie.

In return for expenditures already made in the Gulf of Georgia, Central Del Rio will receive work credits on its acreage in the Northwest Territories and offshore Nova Scotia.

Central Del Rio, planning to merge into a single company with Canadian Pacific Oil and Gas, had a net income of $12,600,000 (41 cents a share) compared with $12,100,000 (40 cents) in 1969.

Sun Goes Down

Net earnings of the Sun Publishing Co. in 1970 were down to $1,542,628 ($2.06 a share) from $2,632,014 ($3.50) a year earlier.

The three-month shutdown through strike was a principal cause of the dip.

The Sun circulation too was hit. In the period of October-December, 1970, it was 223,294 copies a day, against 258,297 in the same period of 1969.

Three Foreign Sources Show Interest in SST

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three foreign sources are interested in buying the U.S. supersonic transport development program abandoned last week by Congress, a transportation department official said Sunday.

William Magruder, SST development chief, said inquiries have come from Japan, West Germany and the Middle East.

Magruder said congressional leaders "have made no attempt to discourage" a plan to sell the package to pay for termination costs of the SST program.

He estimated the costs at between $97 and $157 million, depending on whether airlines get back their SST purchase deposits.

Transportation Secretary John Volpe said on the CBS television-radio program Face the Nation he was not free to give details on the offer from the Middle East. The name of the person representing these interests would mean nothing, he said, "and we don't know who those interests are."

Magruder said in a telephone interview after the show another inquiry came from West Germany, but declined to identify what interests were involved.

The Japanese inquiry was made by Ataka, a trading firm, and came in the form of a request that the state department set up a trade-mission visit on the matter, Magruder said.

PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) — Economist John Kenneth Galbraith said Saturday the British-French supersonic transport plane Concorde is doomed.

Speaking at a management conference, the Harvard professor and former ambassador to India said the U.S. Senate decision to drop support of the American SST project means the end of the Concorde.

"The argument that supersonic transport is physically and psychologically damaging applies wherever the aircraft is made and that argument would give moral impetus to the latent American protectionism every time the Concorde flew over New York," Galbraith said.

"Concorde will not be a success if it has to land 100 miles short of New York and without the North Atlantic traffic, the project is doomed," he added.

Britain and France have built and successfully tested Concorde prototypes while spending some $2 billion in development costs. But they have yet to order production for commercial airlines.

Britain estimates at least 100 Concordes must be sold to break even. So far 16 airlines have taken options on 74 of the aircraft.

Concorde Entry Postponed

LONDON AP) — The British-French supersonic airliner Concorde is not expected to be ready to enter service until at least the fall of 1974, it was disclosed Monday.

There was no official explanation of the nine-month delay. Most recent estimates by the British government and the British Aircraft Corp.—which is building the plane with Aerospatial of France — were that Concorde would be in service by late 1973 or early 1974.

Cable Will Add Phone Circuits

Hearings June 7

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Transport Commission announced Monday that public hearing will begin June 7 on an application by British Columbia Telephone Co. for rate increases.

Following a pre-hearing conference with interested parties the commission said the location of the hearings — expected to be in B.C. — will be announced later this week.

The commission also announced the hearings will deal mainly with evidence and information for the period since Dec. 31, 1965. At that time, the commission's predecessor, the Board of Transport Commissioners, conducted an extensive study of B.C. Tel's operations.

At Monday's conference, those indicating they planned to oppose the rate application included: the B.C. government, represented by the attorney-general's department; the cities of Victoria Vancouver and Grand Forks; the district of Coquitlam; the village of Lions Bay; the B.C. Hotels Association, and the B.C. branch of the Canadian Bar Assiciation.

Now...three Chevron gasolines all with F-310*

With the introduction of Chevron Unleaded Gasoline into the Lower Mainland and Victoria areas, F-310 is now available in three grades of Chevron Gasolines:

Chevron Supreme with F-310

Chevron Unleaded with F-310

For those 1971 cars designed to operate on lower octane unleaded gasolines. It is also suitable for some pre-1971 cars which will operate satisfactorily on lower-octane fuel.

Chevron Gasoline with F-310

Improved Engine Performance
This means that every Chevron customer in the Lower Mainland and Victoria areas — by selecting whichever grade of Chevron gasoline is proper for his car — can now benefit from the qualities of F-310. Here's why.

When deposits build up in your carburetor and PCV (positive crankcase ventilation) valve, the fuel mixture becomes too rich — the result: rough idle, stalling and wasted fuel. When these deposits are removed, good engine performance is restored — and mileage improves because gasoline is no longer being wasted. F-310 was developed specifically to clean the critical parts of dirty engines and to keep clean engines clean.
These extra performance benefits are now in all three grades of Chevron gasoline — all with F-310.

Alma Mater Leader Survives

University of Victoria Alma Mater Society president Ian McKinnon survived a non-confidence motion in the Representative Assembly Sunday night, but faces another test Monday.

The motion, which expressed non-confidence in McKinnon and requested his resignation within 24 hours of the meeting or that a duly constituted by-election be held this coming week, was defeated by a vote of 14 to 23.

It was the second non-confidence motion McKinnon faced during the month he has been president of the AMS. The previous motion, presented two weeks earlier, was defeated by a vote of 8 to 12.

Bryan Green, who presented the motion, said that contradictions" in public statements relating to the assembly. Green charged McKinnon with "switching like a pendulum for or against motions, depending on public sentiment."

Alastair Murdoch, who seconded the motion, said he felt McKinnon "would still make a good representative," but that "his ideas are not those of the majority of students," and he should resign as president.

Most of those who supported the motion to dismiss McKinnon stressed that although he had the right to vote as he liked as an individual, he was not acting as a spokesman for student desires as the AMS constitution demands.

At one point McKinnon was accused of "plotting against the RA" in a meeting between himself, members of the administration, and two of three other members of the RA who opposed a motion asking for a one-year moratorium on the contracts of 12 UVic faculty members whose contracts are not being renewed.

McKinnon earlier admitted that he had conveyed his opposition to that motion to board of governors secretary Trevor Matthews. McKinnon said his opposition was based on a time-limit placed on the board to reply to the motion.

McKinnon also denied saying, that it was members of the steering committee who had threatened him with violence, as he was quoted as saying last week.

McKinnon defended himself by saying he was not guilty of all charges raised. "I do not believe the charges levelled against me justify my resignation," he said.

One student said McKinnon ought to resign "on ethics", as he "had caused a large split among the student

Although the RA defeated the non-confidence motion, it voted overwhelmingly in favor of holding a general meeting Wednesday at noon to give the student body a chance to decide McKinnon's future as president. Petitions asking for McKinnon's resignation have been circulating on campus since late last week.

The meeting was attended by about 120 interested onlookers. When the results of the non-confidence vote were announced, most observers loudly booed the assembly.

One onlooker, obviously angry, told the Colonist, "This proves the RA is just like the board of governors; they don't give a damn about students."

Several faculty members were also in attendance.

April Visit

First visit to B.C. will be made April 4 to 8 by Sir Peter Hayman, British high commissioner to Canada, and Lady Hayman. In Victoria the Haymans will be guests of Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Nicholson at Government House. The high commissioner will speak at Royal Roads April 6.

Wet Lamb, That's Our March

March came to Victoria like a lion, but it's expected to go out like a lamb — a wet lamb, however.

The weather office reported Monday night that while there will be a brief respite from the rain today, it will return Wednesday.

However, despite the rainfall, the month's total at Gonzales observatory was only 0.48 inches greater than the average for the period. The weather office reported that 2.45 inches rain had fallen this month, compared to an average of 1.97 inches.

Since Jan. 1, a total of 9.84 inches has fallen, compared to the average 9.58 inches.

Nearly twice as much rain fell during the month at the airport as at Gonzales. A total of 4.64 inches fell there for a 1971 total of 14.87 inches.

A weather office spokesman said the forecast was for showers this morning with sunny periods this afternoon. Winds are expected to be light.

Lawson, After Teamsters Lose Struck Goods Case:

Mediation Handwriting on the Wall

By DON COLLINS

Senator Ed Lawson says the handwriting is on the wall: Unions refusing to appear before the B.C. Mediation Commission are going to be dealt with severely.

Lawson, Canadian director of the Teamsters Union, said this has been made clear by the manner in which the controversial commission has handled a Teamsters dispute.

In a report handed down after hearings boycotted by the Teamstes, the commission rejects the union's bid for a struck goods clause.

"But there is the question of not one, but nine issues that were in dispute," Lawson said from Vancouver in an interview with the Colonist Monday night. "The commission has sidestepped this nicely because the union didn't appear."

He repeated his claim that an appearance before the commission by the Teamsters in an earlier dispute had cost the union $391,000 because of an award that was less than what had been offered by the cement industry.

"The penalty this time is to decide against us on seven issues," he said. "In none of these cases were the issues judged on their merits. This is obviously intended to be public notice that unions failing to appear before the commission will be severely penalized."

The union's main goal in a dispute that led to a strike-lockout in the general trucking and warehousing industry and a government back-to-work order, was the struck goods clause. It would have meant no member would be compelled to handle goods brought from behind a picket line by non-union personnel.

Blair Whitelock, president of the union's Vancouver-based Local 31, said the Teamsters will carry on the battle for the clause when negotiations start later this year for a 1972 contract in B.C., and also in connection with contracts for inter-provincial trucking — something that is under federal juisdiction.

Both Whitelock and Lawson confirmed that the union will be following the "Teamsters law" by shutting down any employer who disciplines a union member who refuses to handle goods brought through a picket line.

They said the law was a policy decision made at a membership meeting held by the union when it discussed the back-to-work order in February.

The dispute between the Teamsters and the Automotive Transport Labor Relations Association was sent to the commission for binding decision by the cabinet after a week-long strike-lockout in the industry.

In an 11-page report signed by commission chairman John Parker, the commission says the Trade-Unions Act of B.C. recognizes legal strikes and lockouts but limits picketing to the employer's place of business, operations or employment.

"The law says in effect that no trade union or other person shall endeavor to persuade anyone not to handle struck goods," the report says. "It would be high-handed indeed for us to withdraw this protection which the Legislature has granted employers and if we did so, we would clearly be violating the spirit of the law if not the law itself."

The enforced contract is retroactive to Jan. 2 and expires at the end of the year. All Teamster contracts — involving some 5,500 men — will be ending this year and disputes could threaten to close down 100 per cent of the trucking industry in the province.

The new schedule of wages agreed to by the union and association last January in connection with the last dispute, is included in the binding settlement.

Under terms of this contract, wages range from $4.20 an hour for swampers and warehousemen to $4.35 for drivers of heavy trucks. The last wage scale was $3.80 for swampers and warehousemen and $3.95 for drivers of heavy equipment.

The government's back-to-work order was made Feb. 26 and the commission held a series of hearings. The union boycotted the hearings, a policy followed by most unions in the province in objection to what they see as unfair labor legislation with compulsory measures.

Hospital Ownership Move Surprises

An official of Rest Haven Hospital said Monday he is surprised the Capital Region's hospital board has decided to press for the formation of an ownership group "acceptable to B.C. Hospital Insurance Service" to operate the new Saanich Peninsula Hospital.

Mayor J. B. Cumming of North Saanich, deputy chairman of regional hospital board, said last week it was intended that the group now operating Rest Haven will run the new hospital.

However, Cumming said, the problem is that Rest Haven is operated by a private society of the Seventh Day Adventists. The society set up for the new hospital will be expected to have a wider representation of the public on its board of management.

F. L. Bell, administrator of Rest Haven, said Monday in an interview the regional board decision was a surprise because the hospital has done everything asked of it in respect of its new bylaws.

"We sent our proposed bylaws to BCHIS in November but we have not heard anything back," he added. "We haven't had one line of official communication."

Bell said the hospital closely followed the government's recommended format when it prepared the draft bylaws.

Youthful Band Picked

One of the many youth musical organizations in Greater Victoria, the Victoria city police youth band, has been chosen to provide music for the official welcome of Queen Elizabeth to the city at 7 p.m., May 3 in Centennial Square.

Officials indicated Monday the choice was made in keeping with the theme of the 10-minute ceremony, which will mix youth and senior citizenry. Members of youth groups will line the perimeter of the square while representatives of such groups as the Legion and IODE will also take part.

The ceremony will include introduction of the Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne to Greater Victoria mayors, a welcome by Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, gifts for the visitors, signing of the city book, bouquets and a walk through the crowd.

The 45-member band, led by John Baker, will play for half an hour before the ceremony and then will have the honor of playing O Canada as the royal party arrives and God Save the Queen as it leaves.

The economy Corolla. What you don't get you don't really need.

No fish tails, no racing stripes, no wind spoilers. There are lots of things you don't get with the Corolla 1200. Like parking problems and speeding tickets and great big monthly payments. What you do get is where you're going. And for some people that's enough.

Instead of the windswept speed machine that always gets the girl, some people like the classic, superbly built Corolla that gets up to 35 miles per gallon. They don't mind not being able to keep up with the big guys. They just want to keep up with the traffic. And the payments.

So instead of the usual long list of options, they prefer our unusually long list of standard equipment.

It includes 73 hp, front disc brakes, a 4-speed synchromesh transmission, (the automatic is optional) an electric rear window defroster, fully reclining front bucket seats, and so on.

Some people feel it's all you need to get around. And we're glad of that. Because it's all we could get into one car for under $2,000.*

Don Stubbs scored the winning goal with 15 seconds remaining for the victory to avoid the need for a playoff with Prince George. Prince George finished with four wins and a loss, a 5-3 loss Sunday to Nanaimo.

North Kamloops built a 4-1 lead in the first two periods on goals by Bryan James, Greg Duncan, Frank Ramunna and Randy Takenaka. Wade Smith got Nanaimo's first goal and Howard Beamish, Clint Eccles and Gordie Dumont scored to set the stage for Stubbs' winner.

Prince George completed its schedule with a pair of wins Monday, 4-0 over Crambrook and 5-1 over North Kamloops. In other Monday games, Vancouver North Shore topped Trail, 7-4 and Cranbrook edged Trail, 7-6 in a game which decided the Kootenays championship.

Drydens Latest Brother Act To Earn Hockey Headlines

Another brother act has been added to the National Hockey League, and it looks as if it may have a long run.

Bobby and Dennis Hull, Phil and Tony Esposito, Frank and Pete Mahovlich and Barclay, Bob and Bill Plager have earned most of the headlines as the leading brother acts in the NHL but the Drydens, Dave and Ken, moved in on Sunday night.

Ken, a Cornell University product in his first professional season, played brilliantly in Chicago, where Montreal Canadiens ran their winning streak to six games by edging the Black Hawks, 2-1.

Dave, six years older than his 23-year-old brother, also came through with a fine performance in Buffalo Sabres' 4-2 win over Minnesota North Stars.

The Drydens made a bit of NHL history on March 20 when they became the first goal-keeping brothers to face each other in an NHL game.

Ken won that game, 5-2, and his victory Sunday night left him with a 5-0 NHL record. And while he has yet to get his first shutout, he has allowed only seven goals.

ROBS BOBBY HULL

He had to make 35 stops to beat the Hawks, and he was particularly good against Bobby Hull, who made several bids for his 45th goal but couldn't get the puck past the big youngster.

Yvan Cournoyer set up Frank Mahovlich for a power-play goal early in the first period, then scored what was to be the winning goal early in the third period.

NO WORSE THAN TIE

In Buffalo, the Sabres assured themselves of no worse than being tied for last place in the East Division. They are still eight points ahead of Vancouver Canucks, who have only four games remaining.

While the elder Dryden played steadily, Sabres opened up a 3-0 lead by 10:37 of the second period and took a 4-1 margin into the final 20 minutes.

Action brought a share of a record for North Stars' Jude Drouin and Gil Perreault of the Sabres.

Drouin scored the first Minnesota goal while Perreault picked up two assists. That left both players with a rookie record of 67 points.

Tom Webster of Detroit held the record before Sunday, having produced a 66th point Saturday night to erase the mark of 65 set by Minnesota's Danny Grant two seasons ago.

Sunday also brought a fourth straight defeat for Boston Bruins, who followed it with the announcement that they were about to get serious again and intended to use Bobby Orr regularly for their last three scheduled games.

POWER PLAYS ONLY

Orr, who normally plays about 35 minutes a game, played less than seven minutes Sunday and was out only on power plays as the Bruins took a 2-1 defeat from New York Rangers.

Orr was also used sparingly in the first three defeats in the Bruins' longest losing streak of the season.

In other Sunday games, Philadelphia Flyers clinched the last playoff spot in the East Division by defeating Pittsburgh Penguins, 3-1; Vancouver Canucks interrupted a road trip to come home and trounce California Golden Seals, 11-5; and Detroit beat Toronto Maple Leafs, 2-1.

POINT SPREE

Fourteen Canucks drew at least one point in the club's biggest scoring splurge with Wayne Maki making the biggest gain by scoring three goals and drawing assists on two others.

Mike Corrigan had a goal and three assists, rookie Dale Tallon two goals and an assist and Andre Boudrias, Murray Hall and Rosaire Paiement all had three points.

NHL Playoff TV Coverage Could Upstage Oscar Show

First details of TV coverage of the NHL playoffs came Monday from the CBC and CBS networks, and the Canadian announcement showed Oscar is going to take second place to hockey.

Only two games are definite — Montreal at Boston at 5 p.m. Wednesday, April 7, and Toronto at New York at 4:30 p.m. Thursday, April 8, both on Channels 2 and 6 in this area.

The CBC also says it expects to show a game at 5 p.m. Saturday, April 10, with teams not known. But past experience has been Saturday evening games are dropped in the playoffs and Sunday morning games are held instead, to get on U.S. television.

CBS says it will show a game at 10 a.m. Sunday, April 11 (Channels 7 and 12) although the teams have not been named.

Probable games are New York at Toronto at 5 p.m. Sunday, April 11; Montreal at Boston at 5 p.m. Tuesday, April 13, and New York at Toronto at 5 p.m. Thursday, April 15, all on CBC and Channels 2 and 6.

The April 15 game is where Oscar comes in. The CBC says it will run the New York-Toronto game to its conclusion and join the annual Hollywood Oscars show, set for that night, when the game is over. If it's overtime and a long one, Oscar may not make it at all.

On Muddy Field

Viking XV Tops Visitors

University of Victoria Vikings Monday handed the University of California (Los Angeles) the third straight loss on its three-match rugby tour of British Columbia, 6-0, in muddy conditions at Macdonald Park.

Last Thursday the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds defeated UCLA, 17-10, to win the World Cup — competed for annually between the two universities — for the first time in 10 years. And UCLA was beaten, 11-9, by the Vancouver Representative XV in its other game.

Obviously upset by the soggy state of the ground and the wet, slippery ball, UCLA was badly beaten in the scrums and loose rucks by the Victoria forwards. The California players were heavily penalized — more than 20 penalties were called against them compared with only three against the Vikings — and most were for forward infringements.

The match was transferred from Centennial Stadium as the field there was ruled unfit to use and Macdonald Park itself quickly became a mudbath as both teams scrambled around in what became predominantly a forward encounter.

Vikings, champions of the Pacific Northwest Intercollegiate Rugby Conference, adapted far better to the wet and, despite being without regular hooker Derek Reimer, who was out with the measles, the pack was spurred on by a great performance from Ken Wilke.

Hoole raced over for a try to give Vikings a 3-0 lead by half time and Frank Carson fell on the ball for a try after the Viking forwards had pushed their opposing eight back over their own line in the second half.

Victoria Earns Volleyball Title

Victoria high school finished with a 6-0 win-loss record to win the Lower Island high school boys' volleyball championship at Oak Bay high school Monday night.

Victoria breezed past Belmont, 15-4, Mt. Douglas, 15-6, Claremont, 15-6, Esquimalt, 15-8, Oak Bay, 15-3, and Mount View, 15-4, on its way to the crown.

Belmont finished second with a 4-2 record and Claremont won a playoff for third place after finishing in a three-way tie with Mt. Doug and Oak Bay. All had 3-3 records but Claremont beat Oak Bay, 17-15 and then downed Mt. Douglas, 15-10, to take third place.

The top three teams go on to the Vancouver Island championship Saturday at Campbell River and the Island winner goes to the British Columbia championships at Williams Lake from April 22 to 24.

Fourth in the Lower Island tournament was Mt. Doug. Oak Bay was fifth, Esquimalt sixth and Mount View seventh.

Victoria placed three players — Bob Munn, Kenson Quon and Oreste Fannuchi — on the all-star team. Others named were Jim Robinson of Oak Bay, Tim Lott of Claremont and Tim Weckend of Belmont. Gavin Proudfoot of Belmont received honorable mention.

Bruins Within Win Of Ousting Cougars

CHILLIWACK — It's hard to believe but tonight could be the last chance to see Victoria Cougars in action this B.C. Junior Hockey League season.

The fired-up Chilliwack Bruins handcuffed the Coastal Division champions, 4-1, before 1709 partisan fans Monday at the Chilliwack Coliseum to take a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven quarter-final series.

Chilliwack, which finished more than 50 points behind Victoria in regular season play, can now end the series with a victory tonight in Memorial Arena in Victoria.

Bruins used the power-play to good effect as they won for the third straight time since losing the opener, 4-6, in Victoria, scoring twice with a man advantage and salting the game in the final period when they had a two-man advantage.

POWER-PLAY GOALS

The power-play gave them a 2-0 lead before the game was eight minutes old, with defenceman Denis Andersen collecting his third goal of the series with a close-in shot from the right side and Mike Randolf following with his third goal on a second odd-man chance.

Pesky Larry Davies then scored the first of his two unassisted goals after stealing the puck and circling behind the net to beat Darryl Fedorak from a narrow angle.

Cougars couldn't dent goalkeeper Lee Hoium, who shut them out here on Friday, 5-0, until Greg Robinson was allowed plenty of time in front of the Chilliwack nets to cut the margin to two goals about two minutes into the final period.

However, Houim, much more severely tested than in his shutout effort, came up with some great saves on Chris Riddell, Rob Little, Gerry Bond and Tom Keep to hold Cougars out.

The frustrated Victorians had their chances end when Bob Mayer (who also got a misconduct for slapping his stick on the ice) and Keep came up with minor penalties 22 seconds apart.

DEFLECTED PASS-OUT

A deflected Cougar pass-out in the Bruin zone gave Chilliwack a clean three-man break and Davies trickled the puck in off Fedorak for his fifth goal of the series.

Bruins' coach Orv Litchffield was extremely happy with his club's over-all showing but doesn't feel the series is wrapped up yet.

METZLER SUSPENDED

All was not happy in the Chilliwack camp, however. Litchfield has suspended Rick Metzler, who came back from an injury to star on a line with Randolph and Anderson, for insubordination.

Despite defeat, it was Cougars' best all-round effort of the series. Playing with Ron Poole, Jim Wilkinson and Wayne Hendry (all called up from the B.C. junior B champion Cubs) in place of Lon Miles, Scott Munro and the injured Pat Askew, the Victorians showed greater hustle and checking, but couldn't get by Holum, who ended with 31 stops.

For Cougars, Robinson and cantain Bond, who needed pain-killing shots for his back injury, were strong both ways and the three junior B players made worthy contributions.

Gary Player Gets 75th Career Win

MIAMI (AP) — Gary Player stormed out of a closely bunched field with two strings of three consecutive birdies Sunday to win the $200,000 National Airlines Open golf tournament.

The South African had a four-under-par 68 and finished with a 274 total, 14-under-par on the 6970-yard Country Club of Miami course.

Player, who won last week's Greater Jacksonville open, won by two strokes over Lee Trevino, the defending champion and Gary's playing partner.

TREVINO SECOND

Trevino had a final 69 for 276. Jerry McGee claimed third with a 66 for 277.

It was Player's 13th victory on the U.S. tour, and marked the first time since Arnold Palmer won the final two events of the 1960 season that anyone had scored consecutive victories.

75TH CAREER WIN

The triumph, the 75th of Player's career, provided him with $40,000. It made his earnings for the last two weeks $65,000 and for his five-stop American tour about $75,643.

George Knudson of Toronto, playing his finest golf in weeks, carded his fourth straight subpar round of the tournament with a 71 to finish at six-under-par 282. Knudson shot matching 70s the first two rounds and then turned in two consecutive 71s. It earned him $2,700.

It looked like a dogfight in the cool, breezy weather as almost a dozen players scrambled for the lead over the early holes.

At one time or another, five either led or shared the lead and at one point, before the leaders made the turn, nine players were locked within one stroke of each other.

Then the black-clad physical fitness faddist from Johannesburg took command.

He birdied the eighth and ninth holes to take a one-stroke lead at the turn and rammed in another birdie putt on the 10th hole.

He nailed it down with another string of three birdies starting on the 14th and built a four-stroke lead that gave him the cushion he needed when he ran into trouble on the last two holes.

Injunction Follows 'Jockey' Charges

DRUMMONDVILLE, Que. (CP) — Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols granted a temporary injunction Sunday to Drummondville Rangers of the Quebec Junior A Hockey League, forcing the league and the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association to allow the team to complete its quarter-final playoff series against Sherbrooke Beavers.

The Rangers were indefinitely suspended Saturday from playoff action when the QAHA ruled they were guilty of jockeying for playoff position during a regular-season game against St. Jerome Alouettes March 16 which they lost 14-8.

The temporary injunction is valid until April 7 and would give the team enough time to finish the best-of-seven quarter-final series which they lead, 2-1.

If the team reaches the semi-finals, an application for renewal of the injunction will be made, a team spokesman said.

The QAHA also suspended Rangers' general manager Yvon Cloutier who coached the team during the St. Jerome game.

Marcel Robert, of Jonquiere, president of the association, said the indefinite suspension could be annulled at the next meeting of the QAHA executive, or it could result in Drummondville's expulsion from the league and association and a life suspension from organized hockey in Quebec for Cloutier.

The league originally suspended both Cloutier and St. Jerome coach Yves Nadon and fined the teams $1,000 each. Two days later, Nadon was absolved from all blame and has since coached his team in their playoff series against Shawinigan Bruins.

Robert said the indefinite suspension came about after a meeting of the QAHA executive committee decided Drummondville was guilty of a flagrant violation of an association rule which recommends suspension for a team not trying to win.

"If we face the Rangers in court, all they can do is try to question the merit of our rule," he said Sunday.

"We're sure of the legality involved, because we had a lawyer at the committee meeting when we decided on the suspension."

QJAHL president Robert Le Bel said Drummondville would definitely play against Sherbrooke Tuesday night in the fourth game of the series.

"We have no choice but to obey the injunction," he said.

"Anyway, if we felt the Rangers should have been suspended in the first place, we would have done it before the playoffs."

First United Saints Keep Island Title

DUNCAN — Defending champions Victoria First United Saints preserved an unbeaten run stretching over two seasons Sunday by defeating Campbell River, 43-29, here in the Vancouver Island bantam girls' basketball championship final.

First United now advances to the B.C. tournament at Salmon Arm this weekend. Also in the tournament are Salmon Arm and Cranbrook.

Saints crushed Saanichton, 75-9, and Duncan, 61-22, on their way to the final.

Campbell River made it to the final through the losers' bracket of the double-knockout tournament with a 54-38 win over Nanaimo and a 44-38 victory over Duncan.

Marg Mainwaring topped the First United scoring with 16 points in the final and she and two other Victoria players — Shirley Marshall and Mairi-Anne Longmore — were named to the all-star team.

Also chosen as all-stars were Aubrey Garside of Duncan and Sharon Rollins of Campbell River who was named the tournament's most valuable player.

New Jobs

Regional Plans Ahead

OTTAWA (CP) — Economic Expansion Minister Jean Marchand disclosed several new regional development programs Monday in the first major assessment of his department's activities since it was set up two years ago.

Marchand told the Commons regional development committee he will soon announce details of a special development corporation in Newfoundland, a new plan to co-ordinate the activity of metalworking plants around Saint John, N.B., and other "new agreements which will indicate the general direction of action to 1975" in Newfoundland, New Brunswick and the three Prairie provinces.

The economic expansion department has stimulated 435 new industrial projects at a federal cost of $126 million to create about 21,500 new jobs under its industrial incentives program since 1969.

The 21,500 jobs, Marchand said, are "new jobs directly in the plants as they come into their intended normal operation."

Marchand said it was too early to assess all the results of the department's work but that he was ready to take risks to improve development programs now underway.

Stolen Car Death Probe Set

CRANBROOK (CP) — Coroner Dr. Laird Wylie has scheduled an inquiry into the death Saturday in a car crash of Ivan Joseph Papequash, 24, of Winnipeg.

The CP Rail worker died in the wreck of a car belonging to Kootenay Sheriff Tom Fox of Nelson, 12 hours after the car was reported stolen.

Sheriff Fox said his car disappeared at 7 p.m. Saturday from a parking lot at a motel where he was staying for the spring assize.

Early Sunday, a motorist reported to RCMP that a vehicle was demolished on the southern trans-provincial highway five miles north of here. The car had plowed into two trees and a utility pole.

Hotel Blaze Kills Four

CANANDAIGUA, N.Y. (AP) — Fire destroyed the 117-year-old Canandaigua Inn early Monday, leaving at least four persons dead, five missing and nine injured.

Three bodies were recovered from the ruins. A fourth man died in hospital of a heart attack.

Firemen said the bodies found in the rubble were so badly burned it would take hours to identify them.

Brussels Police Out for Day

BRUSSELS (AP) — Belgium's 12,000 municipal policemen went on a one-day strike Monday for higher pay and recognition of their trade union.

The police said they would answer only urgent calls. Traffic posts were unmanned, but many motorists headed the government radio's advice to leave their cars at home.

Rail Talks Resume Today

OTTAWA (CP) — The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers resumes contract talks with Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railways today following widespread work stoppages in B.C. and Alberta.

The Montreal negotiations begin again with the union talking of a possible strike vote.

Both sides have said they plan to "negotiate to a conclusion" but Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey told the Commons Monday he is prepared to intervene personally if "at all necessary."

Talks broke off last week just after a three-man conciliation board reported to the federal government that it was unable to reach agreement on a wage settlement.

Union contracts expired with CP Rail March 15, 1970, and with the CNR April 30, 1970.

L. O. Hemmingson of Montreal, the union's assistant grand chief engineer, said in a telephone interview Monday:

"We have had nothing realistic in better than a year of negotiation."

This had led to the work stoppages on the west coast.

Spokesmen for both railways said Monday that freight and passenger service is completely paralyzed in British Columbia.

Enginemen started booking off work in the Vancouver area last Wednesday. The book-off spread to Prince George in central B.C. Sunday.

CP Rail services in Calgary and Lethbridge have also been hit by the stoppage, a railway spokesman in Montreal said.

A CNR spokesman said in Vancouver that only three or four engine crews had not stopped working on the CNR line between Jasper, Alta. and Prince Rupert, B.C. But these crews were at the ends of the line and could not keep traffic moving.

CP Rail said its dayliner service between Victoria and Courtenay on Vancouver Island is the only line in its B.C. system still operating.

The layoffs have made idle about 4,000 railway employees.

About 200 enginemen in Edmonton have voted to withdraw from service if engineers in B.C. are disciplined for booking-off.

SECOND NEWS SECTION — VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, TUESDAY, MARCH 30, 1971 — PAGE SEVENTEEN

Day's Pay Coming To Some

Greater Victoria school board was told Monday night that at least 110 of it's 1,300 teachers will not lose one day's pay as a result of the strike March 9.

A. J. Longmore, district superintendent of schools, said the figure of 110 was a preliminary total of the number of teachers who either appeared in classrooms or were absent for legitimate, medical reasons when the B.C. Teachers' Federation called a strike to protest the provincial government's pension policies.

The board was told Education Minister Donald Brothers has advised that the March operating grant from the provincial government will be reduced by a fraction of one-twenty-third, based on the assumption all schools were closed for one of the month's 23 school days.

However, several trustees said this was an erroneous assumption because it did not take into account the fact that maintenance crews were on duty, the schools were heated and administrative personnel worked that day.

Brothers has told school boards the government's grant reduction can be modified on receipt by his department of statements from boards showing how many teachers did not participate in the strike.

Longmore said he will know definitely by Wednesday how many teachers participated in the strike, and the board then can start calculating the loss in its March operating grant.

The board also endorsed new working agreement with about 165 clerical personnel, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees. They will get 7½ per cent pay increases in each of the two years of the contract that expires Dec. 31, 1972.

Continuing their review of unexpended referendum funds, trustees declared as surplus $724,922 of the $13,187,000 that was accepted by ratepayers for new school construction in a vote in 1967.

The money was not spent because of plans that had to be amended as a result of population changes in the school district.

After examining the details of unexpended money from Referendum No. 10, the board decided to tag $3,790,608 of available funds for a 1972 building program.

Victoria Outside Workers

Municipal Strike Possible

Unless a government mediator is able to effect a settlement, Victoria could be in for a municipal strike that would tie up such essential services as garbage collection and road maintenance.

However, it wouldn't come about for another week or so at the earliest — and quite likely not even then.

Much depends on the success of the provincial mediator who was appointed last Friday and whether his term is extended. Under law, a strike or lockout can't be called while a mediator is on the job. The term in this case is believed to be 10 days.

The dispute with the city of Victoria involves the 240 outside workers of Local 50, Canadian Union of Public Employees, who served 72-hour strike notice Monday.

Normally, such notice would give the workers the right to strike anytime within a 90-day period once the 72 hours had lapsed.

The local favored strike action by an 87 per cent margin when a vote was taken Sunday.

Meanwhile, the inside workers — Local 388 of the same union — voted Monday night as expected "by a significant margin" to accept the city's offer of a 7½ per cent wage increase in each of two years and a reduction of the work week from 37½ to 35 hours.

There are 220 members of the inside workers' unit who were reportedly earning from $318 to more than $800 a month under the last contract.

Mayor Courtney Haddock said the outside workers had asked for a substantially bigger increase than the one accepted by the inside workers and added that "there is no way we can grant their request."

He said he hoped the issue wouldn't come to a strike and was confident "reason will prevail."

"We have a large segment of our population living on fixed incomes," he said.

"They can't afford huge tax increases and I wish our employees would take that into consideration."

He added: "I wish they (workers) would start looking for the benefits of living in Victoria rather than the disadvantages."

Alex Markides, area representative with CUPE, said it was "time this ridiculous story about the advantages of Victoria" was brought to public attention.

He said it had reached the point where he almost expected a local minicipality or school board to suggest the advantages as a fringe benefit.

There was no hard figure available for what the outside workers are seeking, but Markides said it was more than the amount accepted by the inside workers.

He said this is because the outside men are trying to catch up to the rates earned by their counterparts up-Island. The base rate here under the 1970 agreement was $3.08 an hour, he said. The up-Island rate is going from $3.46 this year to $3.76 next year.

Haddock said "times aren't easy" for Victoria and that economic conditions aren't the same as they are to the Markides said it is his union's contention that this isn't so.

The outside workers are members of the parks, traffic and street departments and among their responsibilities are garbage collection, street sweeping, road maintenance, park care and the clearing of storm drains.

Little talk of computers —William E. John Conspiracy Dean Computes Doubt

By BILL BARRINGHER

Some people collect stamps. Other people collect conspiracies, pondering every wrinkle of the plot and flyspeck of evidence like a mad philatelist searching for the one bad engraving that will make him a millionaire.

The U.S. has always provided fertile soil for conspiracy collectors, particularly since the murder of President John Kennedy.

When the Warren commission failed to find a plot to the collectors' liking, hundreds of individuals and groups across the nation set out on their own investigations, according to Richard Sprague, himself one of the deans of conspiracy collecting as a member of the board of something called The National Committee to Investigate Assassinations.

"Our committee was formed to pull all these people and their findings together," Sprague said Monday night, adding that active membership totalled 300, and 700 others were on the committee's mailing list.

Sprague was in Victoria from his home base of Hartsdale, N.Y., for a guest lecture at the University of Victoria on the Kennedy assassination and the use of computers in analysing evidence.

Because his talk was sponsored by the mathematics department, and because Sprague is head of his own computer consultation firm, Personal Data Services Corp., one rather expected the talk to be a detailed, scientific explanation of just how evidence is programmed, sifted and judged by a computer. An interesting proposition, particularly to math students, who had been urged to attend.

Assassinations His Forte

Just prior to his talk, Sprague told the Colonist computers had been used "largely to . . . uh, collate the material. We plan to use them more, though."

In his talk to the students, Sprague started out with a plug for Jim Garrison's new book, telling the audience that no matter what they thought of the New Orleans district attorney, the volume was worth a read.

Then he launched into a series of blurred slides, pointing out in dead earnest that this blob might be a face and that shadow could be a puff of smoke, and it's all right there on film, if only Life magazine and the FBI, the news services, and the Warren commission would open their secret files.

Sprague promised to name names in a conspiracy, and then told the students if they came to the committee's headquarters in Washington, D.C., he would do just that.

He did name some people, mostly dead and unable to bring lawsuits, and went through the entire Garrison litany of dark forces linking New Orleans, the CIA, Dallas police, the Cuban invasion, and all.

Enough legitimate questions were raised to cast doubt on the completeness of the Warren report, however, which one supposes was the point of Sprague's talk.

But it looks like computers are a long way from solving assasssinations. The big machines were barely mentioned.

And if electronic brains ever do get into conspiracies as their own little hobby, Sprague has plenty of data ready when the Dallas affair has been solved.

"The committee," he said, "is also working on the Robert Kennedy case and the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King."

'Make Things Happen'

Esquimalt Rezones Waterfront Area

Esquimalt council created a new zoning category Monday night in the hope that it will "make things happen at the waterfront."

No delegations appeared at the public hearing to either oppose or support the rezoning of a four-acre parcel of land from industrial to M-2 marina district.

The property in question is located between Head Street and West Bay and stretches from the Work Point Barracks to Paradise Street.

Mayor Arthur Young said in an interview prior to the rezoning he hopes that the change will have a beneficial effect on the waterfront area.

"This property has been zoned industrial for years, but nothing has happened in the area to speak of. We now hope the new zoning will make things happen at the waterfront," he said.

The emphasis, he said, would be placed on marine development "with an eye to beauty."

At present, the area contains two marinas, both of which, according to Young, are scheduled for extensive improvements. There are also a number of homes which will remain in the area as permitted uses.

Other uses permitted under the new zoning category include restaurants, showrooms for display or sale of small boats and engines, marine fuelling stations, bait and tackle stores, gift stores, boat rentals and boatbuilding facilities.

Uses not permitted are boat houses and floating boat shelters, metal plate work resulting in offensive noise and public boat-launching ramps.

Ramps and boat houses, a council spokesman said, weren't permitted because of their "pretty ugly appearance."

Esquimalt owns a small portion of the four acres and Young said he hopes the municipality will be able to acquire more as it becomes available. The part owned by Esquimalt consists of five adjoining lots out of a total of 35.

In other business, council approved inclusion of $3,000 in the 1971 budget for installation of washrooms and a number of minor structural changes at Jubilee Hall on Fraser.

Council also approved the spending of $2,000 for immediate repairs and the painting of the premises. The municipally-owned hall serves Esquimalt's senior citizens as a meeting place.

A request by the city of Victoria for joint wage negotiations of civic employee contracts was referred back to council's finance committee.

A motion to decline the city's request was turned down by council following Mayor Arthur Young's appeal to "think twice before saying no" to Victoria's invitation to negotiate on a joint basis.

"The city's suggestion has a lot of merit. The way it is now, Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt will pretty well have to pay what Saanich approved," Young said.

"One municipality sets the pace and that's it. We'd be much stronger if we negotiated together," he added.

Saanich has refused the city's request; Oak Bay council has expressed interest in the proposal and has said the matter should be discussed by the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal committee.

Beautification On Maybe List

Esquimalt council voted in favor Monday night of beautifying Esquimalt Road at a cost of $4,000, but whether the work will ever be done is another question.

"Let's include it in the budget; we can always cut it out at budget time," said Mayor Arthur Young.

If the proposal survives the budget-trimming session sometime in the next four or five weeks, the money will be spent on attractive litter bins and planters to be installed along Esquimalt Road.

Also scheduled for this year is the resurfacing of Esquimalt Road from Fraser to Admirals Road at an estimated cost of $8,000, but funds for this project were included in the 1970 capital budget.

Plans for major improvements of Esquimalt Road were proposed recently by the Esquimalt Chamber of Commerce. At a meeting with council, chamber officials said the municipality's major approach was in dire need of beautification.

Site to West Considered For Hospital

By JOHN MATTERS

Capital Region authorities are considering a site west of Victoria for an extended-care centre that eventually might develop into Greater Victoria's fourth large hospital centre.

Mayor J. B. Cumming of man of the Capital Region's North Saanich, deputy chair- hospital board, said Monday that the site would be about 25 acres and the centre likely would be run by the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society.

The first construction would be a 225-bed extended care centre. The regional board last week decided to abandon plans for a 150-bed extended-care unit adjoining St. Joseph's Hospital and, instead, consolidate that allotment with 75 beds proposed for St. Mary's Priory.

Cumming would not say what sites are under consideration for the new hospital. However, he explained that he and Dennis Young, regional board's executive director, had an appointment later this week to discuss one parcel.

He also explained that before the regional hospital board decided to abandon the St. Joseph's extended-care project last week, the board's planning department had spent three weeks investigating possible locations for the new hospital.

A. h. Roberts, the board's planning director, produced a map showing nine possible sites for a new hospital, said Cumming.

He added that 300 acres owned by the provincial government on Wilkinson Road also were considered. This is the site of Glendale, the hospital for the mentally and physically disabled that will open later this year.

In addition to having such facilities as a laundry nearby, said Cumming, it also had the advantage of being serviced by sewers.

However, Cumming indicated that the Glendale site was ruled out because of its proximity to the proposed Peninsula Hospital, for which regional board has bought 22 acres on Mount Newton Cross Road in Central Saanich.

The Peninsula hospital would be an acute-care centre in the first phase — it's meant to be a replacement for Rest Haven Hospital at Sidney — and a subsequent phase would add facilities for extended-care beds.

Cumming said that when the region had to look elsewhere than St. Joseph's for extended care beds the question of a new acute-care centre had to become part of the rationale.

While acute-care facilities would be in the distant future for a new hospital site west of Victoria, Cumming said such a service undoubtedly will become necessary and in fact has been forecast by several authorities.

The Juan de Fuca Hospital Society, which Cumming said might take over the management of the new, was organized a year ago to look after the tentative allocation of 75 beds to St. Mary's Priory.

Many Bugged Again By Familiar Aches

A large number of persons in Victoria are going to their doctors with symptoms resembling those produced by the influenza virus that has hit hard at the Lower Mainland, it was indicated Monday.

While there has been no pronounced increase here in admissions to hospital for respiratory illness, there were a few reports of unusual absenteeism from school or work.

For example, an official of St. Joseph's Hospital said an unusually high number of employees stayed home Monday, most of them complaining of the flu.

However, doctors are not certain whether they are seeing the beginning of a new outbreak or the end of one that hit Greater Victoria in mid-January.

The symptoms appear to be similar: headache, diarrhea, a dry cough and aches and pains.

The influenza outbreak on the Lower Mainland has caused heavy absenteeism in schools and industries and has forced some hospitals to cancel visiting hours.

Open House Saturday By Cool-Aid

Cool-Aid will hold an open house from 12 to 5 p.m. Saturday at the Emmanuel Baptist Church, Fernwood and Gladstone.

Cool-Aid hopes to buy the church and use it to accommodate young transients this summer. Cool-Aid staff and members of the Victoria Youth Council will conduct the public on guided tours of the building.

There will be a second public hearing on Cool-Aid's proposal to buy the church, April 8 at Victoria city hall.

Bed Lack Cancels 11 Operations

St. Joseph's Hospital has cancelled operations for 11 persons that were scheduled today because of a bed shortage.

Dr. E. G. Q. Van Tilburg, the hospital's executive director, said the cancellations were all for elective surgery and most of the persons have been waiting for several months.

"They are unhappy because they had waited for a long time but it's been a disaster here today," he said Monday. "The patients are backing up in hospital and it was a bad weekend with many emergency admissions."

As a result, most of today's slate of about 35 operations will be persons from the urgent and emergency lists.

Van Tilburg said in recent months one or two cancelled elective operations each day were not uncommon but the 11 who had to be taken off today's slate were an indication that the bed shortage was grave.

He said operating rooms have the capability of taking all the elective cases as well, but there would not be any beds for them once they left surgery.

Dr. J. L. Heffernan, president of St. Joseph's medical staff, said the overcrowding problems likely would not be as grave if the hospital used about 30,000 square feet of vacant space on its sixth floor.

That part of the hospital until last fall was occupied by the Sisters of St. Ann, who now live away from the hospital.

However, the area has remained unoccupied mainly because it does not have elevator service. The proposal is to use part of it for intensive care — a unit that would take the most seriously ill.

Heffernan said enlarging the intensive care unit of St. Joseph's would take the pressure off wards elsewhere in the hospital.

Critical time for new president

New Drama Leader Faces Hectic Time

By BERT BINNY

Currently first vice-president, Mrs. Smith has been a member of the national executive for the past five years and has served on both national and regional committees.

The DDF has a history dating back some 34 years; a national theatrical organization devoted to the encouragement and development of theatre in Canada.

Professional theatre supports the DDF; it supplies employment to members. Theatrical hobbyists support it, too, because of their innate devotion to the theatre and the desire to see it developed.

Over the past two years the DDF has been engaged in an internal study.

"Some new structuring is required," says Mrs. Smith, "due to the arrival and growth in the theatrical scene of universities and professional organizations."

In other words, the 1971 president takes over at a busy and, perhaps, critical time.

But she comes wel prepared both by reason of her DDF experience and, also, because of her deep interest in theatre. Asked how long she had entertained this interest, Mrs. Smith replied simply but unmistakably.:

"Like for ever!"

Theatre Canada 71, including the DDF annual meeting, takes place May 17 to 22 at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa, with Justice Not Revenge by Victoria Fair also on the program.

Modern Life Syndrome

Battered Child, Ailing Parent

EDMONTON (CP) — A pretty 1½-year-old girl was brought into a doctor's office suffering from massive broken arm and a large swelling on the side of her face.

The mother said the little girl had fallen downstairs, but the doctor was doubtful that these injuries had occurred naturally. He admitted the child to hospital, where he found out from her records that she had been in hospital before with concussion — said to have been caused by a fall from a crib.

The doctor called the Alberta social welfare department, which began an investigation into a possible case of child-beating.

Case Histories

Dean Melsness, provincial director of child welfare, said this might be a "typical case of the battered child syndrome." And instances of child-battering are common enough so that typical case histories can be drawn up for study.

The cases are used in medical, nursing and social work courses because beatings of children are common enough to warrant medical and social work personnel being trained to recognize signs and symptoms in time to try to prevent them from leading to death or permanent injury.

She Confessed

In the case Melsness was describing, the mother broke down and admitted she had beaten the child.

"This isn't typical," Melsness said. "In most cases the parents would attempt to deny it and most cases would have to be taken to court — provided the doctor is willing to testify."

But this case is intended to show why the beating took place.

The social worker referred the woman to a psychiatrist. He found out the little girl was the middle child of three. Two boys, four years and six months old, completed the family.

The husband and wife lived in a four-bedroom house in a suburb of a large city. There were no financial difficulties.

But since the birth of the last baby, the woman had not been able to cope with the care of the three small children and all the housework. She got increasingly tired and short-tempered. She felt she never got out of the house.

She could keep the little boy occupied with television and the baby was placid and behaved well.

Girl Would Cry

But the little girl would cry and demand attention.

"I told her to stop," said the mother.

When the 18-month-old girl didn't, the mother picked up a hairbrush and began hitting her. Then she lost control and just kept hitting and hitting.

"I didn't mean to hurt her, though," she said.

The psychiatrist found through questioning the mother had herself felt rejected as a child. Her parents had been extremely strict, spanking her frequently with a piece of board kept for that purpose, and keeping her locked up.

Fairly Common

This history of rejection in the offending parent's own childhood is fairly common, Melsness said.

In this case, the husband was shocked. He had been unaware of any problem on the part of his wife.

In other cases, Melsness said, the other parent often knows about the beatings, but won't say anything about it.

'More Severe'

This little girl returned to her family from the hospital, with the department's social worker continuing to visit regularly. The mother continued to see the psychiatrist. The little boy was started in nursery school.

"This has given the woman a chance," Melsness said. "Left alone and unattended, there would have been the possibility that she would have given a more severe beating another time."

He thinks it is important for health and welfare personnel to have a high "incidence of suspicion" in cases of child-batterings.

Home Situation

"It's better to catch the home situation early and cure it and cure the parent than to have to eventually take the child or all the children away from the home."

He'd like to see small neighborhood mental health agencies that could fill the gaps. But the trouble is that there aren't enough good agency workers to go around.

Beatings in B.C. Show Increase

"But there has been a general increase in reporting of child abuse since the rehabilitation department established a central registry in 1965.

"And since the amendment to the Children's Protection Act came into effect in 1967 shielding citizens from liable suits if they report a suspected case of child brutality."

Belknap says a United States study of the problem in North America put the number of reported cases at about one-third of the total number of youngsters under 19 years of age.

In 1969 in British Columbia, there were 783,200 youngsters under 19 registered among the population.

If the study's statistics holds true, it would account for more thas 260,000 child beatings in this province alone.

There were 70 cases reported to his department in 1965. In 1966 the figure rose to 90 and in 1967 anl '68 jumped to 130. In 1969, 120 cases were reported and last year, 170 cases.

Erma Bombeck Needs Can Opener

By ERMA BOMBECK

The producers of The Odd Couple television series are asking the public how they feel about "canned laughter."

I though they'd never ask. I owe my entire sense of humor to canned laughter. Before laugh tracks, I used to think Bob Hope and Don Rickles were funny men. What did I know?

One day several years ago I was watching the Donna Reed show. Donna bounded into the room, looked at her son, Jeff, and said, "Don't forget your hat." Out of nowhere came 500 people laughing so hard I thought they'd have a hernia.

Thinking I must have missed something I sat upright in my chair and devoted my entire effort to what was being said on the screen. I found Donna could get laughs with such provocative lines as "The doctor isn't in just now," "I'm in the kitchen" and "Hi, there."

The next weekend at a party I went up to the hostess and said, "Hi, there." (I knew she was dying to laugh but didn't dare fall apart in front of her guests.)

Showing no mercy, I continued, "The doctor isn't in." (What control she had as she stared at me blankly.)

Then I went in for the zinger, "I'm in the kitchen." She moved away slowly toward the other guests where I'm sure she repeated my witticisms, as I saw them all look at me and laugh till they were limp as rags.

After that I was the hit of every party. I used lines from the I Love Lucy shows that had gotten terrific laughs from the track like, "Is that you, Ethel?" and "I'll get a job," and "Don't tell Ricky."

Sometimes, I would just raise my eyebrows like I saw Phyllis Diller do in Love: American Style (to an hysterical recording), and people would fight to hold back the tears.

I think one of the biggest thrills I ever got was one night at the theatre. I was watching the dying scene in The Man of LaMancha when a man sitting next to me began to giggle . . . gently at first, then convulsive chokes of laughter.

Finally, the nose snorts came and he wheezed in and out uncontrollably. His laughter built to a momentum and it interspersed the dialogue long after the lines had been delivered.

I turned to him, "Don't I know you?"

"You might," he grinned impishly.

"Weren't you the lead laugher on the Meet the Press laugh track?"

"Yes," he said modestly.

"Then 'Hi, there'," I said extending my hand.

He laughed so hard he fell out of his seat.

A Lovelier You

Much Hinges on Protein

By MARY SUE MILLER

We shampoo, spray, brush and massage with protein products. Their value in the beauty field has been well established. But, although helpful, external application is a mere auxiliary to internal uses.

Protein is the basic material of the body — of your skin, hair, nails, organs, blood, bones and muscles. Obviously your health, energy and looks depend on an adequate protein intake.

Approved reducing diets always stress protein foods. Whether or not you are a weight-watcher, you require a half gram of protein every day for each pound of your normal weight (not of your excess weight). If your normal weight is 120 pounds, your protein quota is 60 grams. You are not likely to make it unless you have two helpings of meat, one of cheese and a pint of milk.

It is thought that an inadequate intake derives from an information lag. Many people are not sure what the high protein foods are. Others have a notion the price is prohibitive. The following table lists some less costly high grade protein foods, along with the grams in an average serving:

Cheaper cuts of beef and lamb — 20; chicken — 20; kidney — 20; liver — 25; turkey — 23; cottage cheese (½ cup) — 20; fish — 20; egg — 7; wheat germ (1 tbsp.) — 8; cup milk — 8.

A thought to ponder is that your body makes a complete turnover in protein every six months. Unless you keep up the supply, you can't be as healthy, handsome and wise as could be.

'Milk Best Food'

Lower Calories As Age Climbs

CHICAGO (UPI) — As your years increase, decrease your calories, says the director of the Hines Veteran's Administration Hospital.

Dr. Lee H. Schlesinger says a recent report he has received indicates overeating is one of the serious problems of aging.

The report, based on the VA's nationwide research on aging and care of geriatric patients, showed that 50 per cent of the men over 65 and 7 per cent of the women surveyed were more than 10 per cent over their optimum weight.

Schlesinger said Dr. Kurt Wolff, director of professional education and research at the VA Hospital at Coatesville, Pa., describes problems of the aged in his book The Emotional Rehabilitation of the Geriatric Patient.

It is recommended that older persons mix dry skim milk or yeast into their foods to reduce calorie intake and fat, and increase protein consumption.

"Milk is probably the best food for later life," Wolff says. "Among the plant proteins, the best is soybeans."

Wolff says brewer's yeast is "one of the richest natural sources of both protein and water-soluble vitamins" and should be taken before meals to combat overweight.

It also can be used to lessen the need for insulin by diabetics . . . (and) help prevent constipation; but is may cause trouble by those afflicted with gout," he says.

Schlesinger says doctors are paying more attention to care of the aged. The percentage of the U.S. population over age 65 has doubled in this century from 4.1 per cent in 1900 to 9.5 per cent in 1968 (from three million persons to 19 million).

One more note — albeit a familiar one—women have a life expectancy of 73.8 years against 66.7 for men, and the female life expectancy is still increasing faster than the male.

Washer Wipes Machine

BOURNEMOUTH, England (UPI) — A dishwashing machine maker asked if any Bournemouth housewife would care to match her ability against his machine.

Mrs. Joyce Brister, 49, said yes.

The manufacturer gave a dinner for 16. There were three courses, coffee and liquers and many dishes used. The dirty dishes were divided between the machine and Mrs. Brister.

The competitors went to work.

The machine maker commented that a person only had to spend six minutes in all putting the dishes into the washer and taking them out. He said three judges had been assembled to decide which dishes were cleaner — those done by Mrs. Brister or those done in the machine.

The judges inspected dishes, cutlery and glasses. They said the cleaner stack had been done by Mrs. Brister.

"I felt great to have beaten the machine," Mrs. Brister said.

New Pages in Lib Book

TAUNTON, Ont. (CP) — As one of the first four girls ever appointed a page for the Ontario legislature, 13-year-old Betsy Scott has been taking a crash course on what is expected: Walk smartly, bow when passing in front it a member who is speaking and no chewing gum on duty.

Walk smartly, she guesses, means "trying not to trip over rugs and stuff."

Traditionally pages have been chosen from boys in members' home ridings. All must have 80-per-cent averages in schoolwork.

Speaker Fred Cass said he had one application from a girl about two years ago and he wrote a polite note of rejection.

Betsy, Dianne Tax of Pontypool, Christine Tukendorg of Port Hope and Annett Hoekstra of Bethany all live in Durham County, the riding of Progressive Conservative member Alex Carruthers.

About 10 days ago, Besty's principal called her into his office.

"He asked if I'd like to be a page girl in Toronto. We phoned my parents and first made sure that I had a place to stay."

Pages stay with friends or relatives during their six to 10 weeks of duty and study under a tutor two days a week.

Betsy says being a page will be a "really good experience."

"I don't know exactly what it will be like when I get there but it seems neat-o."

Asked how she feels about being surrounded by boys in her new post, she said she would feel better if they were all girls but conceded:

Adult Talk Shock

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I and our two children were invited to the home of friends. They have children also. The four adults were having conversation concerning world affairs, the stock market, politics and the problem of educating young people today. Their 16-year-old son joined us. (The younger children were in another part of the house.)

I made the statement that I favored sex education in public schools for the following reason: If parents can't discuss with their children the human body and its functions, such as sexual intercourse and masturbation, they should not object to a qualified teacher dispensing the correct information.

When I verbalized the words "sexual-intercourse and masturbation" my hostess gave me such a kick in the ankle I thought my foot would drop off. I was furious with her for kicking me and decided to speak my mind. I said, "I am sorry if I have spoken out of turn but I assumed you regard your son as an adult since you allowed him to join the conversation." She replied in anger, "I do not regard a 16-year-old as an adult. And you should have sense enough to keep your language within acceptable limits, taking into consideration everyone present."

Needless to say, the rest of the evening was stilted and uncomfortable. On the way home my husband said I was out of order and suggested that I telephone the hostess and apologize. I disagree but said I would do so if Ann Landers thought I should. Do you? — Chicago Reader.

Dear Chicago Reader: No. I do not. A 16-year-old boy should be acquainted with the terms "sexual intercourse" and "masterbation" and not be shocked by them. If the boy's mother didn't consider him sufficiently adult to hear those words she should not have permitted him to join the group.

I do hope this lad is getting sex education in public school because he is not learning much at home if his mother's comments are an index to her approach to the subject.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife is 44 years old, a grandmother three times. She is destroying herself the same way father did — booze and pills.

My mother-in-law shielded her husband for years, lied to his employers, lied to the doctors, lied to neighbors and relatives. She thought she was doing him a favor, but she really helped put him in his grave.

Our two older children left home the minute they were legally able to do so. They couldn't take their mother's drunken rages, her screaming and vomiting, and her passing out. Now that she has started mixing the pills with the booze she is konked out half the time and I never know when I come home from work whether I will find her dead or alive. Three times in the last two years I have had to rush her to the hospital in a coma.

Please tell me what to do. This woman is making a nervous wreck out of me and the children. I am only a working man and can't afford expensive doctors. I need some help.—Rope's End.

Dear R.E.: Your wife should be taken to hospital. Call your family doctor at once and ask him where she should be taken. I'm sure you recognize the fact that your wife has a strong suicidal tendency, and unless the gets treatment soon she will one day achieve her goal.

Task Force Eyes Baby Seal Hunt

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government has established an international task force to study all aspects of the controversial seal hunt off Canada's Atlantic Coast, Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said here Monday.

The minister disclosed the latest government move to combat international criticism of the hunt while speaking to a group of demonstrators protesting the killing of seals.

Prof. Keith Ronald of the department of zoology, University of Guelph, is chairman of the task force, which has already started gathering information.

A spokesman at Davis' Vancouver office said the minister had originally intended to announce formation of the force in Ottawa next week but decided to make its existence known when about a dozen demonstrators showed up at the Bayshore Inn in downtown Vancouver where the minister was addressing a luncheon meeting of the Canadian Forestry Association.

Davis said the six-man task force has been asked to investigate all aspects of the hunting of seals in the northwest Atlantic and Arctic oceans and in particular to invertigate the economic, sociological, ecological and humanitarian aspects of the seal hunt and to recommend any changes in the present regulations which may be considered necessary.

Liquor Ad Bill Over Second Hurdle

The opening debate Monday night on an omnibus bill which includes provision for banning of all print advertising of liquor in B.C. indicated greater-than-anticipated opposition to the move in the Legislature.

Speaker William Murray, noting the many principles involved in the bill, urged members to keep their remarks on the liquor ad issue to a minimum on second reading, saving them for detailed discussion in committee.

However, as expected, Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) came out in opposition to the principle of the liquor section of the bill and said he would abstain from the vote.

Other members on both sides of the house were ciritical of the effectiveness of the proposed ban.

When a voice vote was held, on second reading of the omnibus bill, several members, including Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) said "no." However, the bill passed with a loud enough affirmative shout.

No division was called.

Premier Bennett told the house it was "completely untrue" to suggest Judge Morrow, chairman of the royal commission which recommended changes in B.C. liquor laws last spring, was opposed to the liquor advertising ban.

The premier said the powers of advertising — "the powers of the pushers" — are felt most strongly in connection with liquor rather than tobacco.

"More and more people are drinking more and more," Bennett said. "This is because advertising is known as a tremendous force.

"The power of subtle advertising hangs over our youth. We tell them don't touch drugs, but they see some of us drunk with liquor. The great killer is liquor. We're not advocating prohibition but an end to pushing."

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said in promoting an advertising ban the government was supporting "intemperance" which could lead to Gideon Bibles being banned from hotels.

The NDP member said even the Bible advocated use of "a little wine for thy stomach's sake" and added, "wine maketh glad the heart of man."

He went on to accuse the government of adopting a "Mrs. Grundy" attitude toward liquor ads which wouldn't serve the cause of moderation because it amounted to "pulling down a curtain of silence and ignorance."

Capozzi, admitting he was speaking on behalf of a section of the liquor industry of the province because of his connection with the family firm of Calona Wines, said he objected to the label "pusher." "pusher."

It was "an insult to the industry," he told the house, and added the government never used such terms when trying to attract new wineries to the Okanagan or a new distillery to North Vancouver.

Capozzi warned that experience in other areas where liquor ads have been prohibited has been that hard liquor outsells the more moderate forms of drink.

The Socred said he intended to abstain from the vote, adding, "the real attack," contained in the bill was the fact "I feel very strongly we are taking a step along the road to socialism by making out that advertising itself is bad."

The North American attitude toward liquor of "guzzle, guzzle, guzzle," won't be changed at all by a government bill to ban all liquor advertising in the province, NDP Leader Dave Barrett said.

"This government's approach to the sale of alcohol will not diminish the ruthless guzzling of liquor that goes on," he said.

"The large, barn-like dispensaries of beer do more harm in terms of developing alcoholics than the aggressive attitude that we are going to ban," said Barrett.

The puritanical approach of the Social Credit government toward liquor consumption has led the province to the stage where it has the second highest percentage of alcoholics in Canada, Barrett said. Ontario is the highest.

Ethnic groups with a mature attitude toward liquor do not have an alcohol problem nearly as great as that of groups with the "North American ethic of guzzle, guzzle, guzzle," said Barrett.

He said he would support the bill because he was opposed to the aggressive use of the advertising media to condition people to the use of liquor.

He suggested that what is really needed is the establishment of neighborhood pubs, beer gardens, or ethnic taverns, where beer drinking is a social event.

Bob Strachan (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) said he agreed with Barrett about the "fuddy, duddy application of the liquor laws."

He would support the bill he said, but he realized it would not do away with advertising in magazines.

He was supporting it as a basis to begin the attack on the erroneous, misleading, subliminal advertising that is part of today's sick society.

"It is not just with cigarettes or liquor that this kind of misleading status symbol building advertising has been so common," said Strachan.

"The whole field of North American endeavor has been twisted and warped through exaggeration of Madison Avenue madness. Subliminal advertising has done so much to create the wrong attitude in society."

Allan Williams (Liberal-West Vancouver-Howe Sound) attacked the direction of the legislation saying that application of some of the suggestions of the royal commission on liquor would have been more desirable.

The government, he said, should either educate people in the use of liquor or ban it altogether.

Cash Bag Vanishes From Store

Disappearance of a money bag containing $1,215 sometime in a 12-hour period last Friday and Saturday from Zeller's store at 1610 Hillside was disclosed Monday by Victoria police.

A police report said the bag contained between $800 and $1,000 in cash with the rest in cheques and account sales, and it vanished between 9:30 p.m. Friday and 9:10 a.m. Saturday.

Police said company policy provides a numbered bag for each till in the store, with all bags checked off in a book as they arrive in the office and safe area, then put in the safe after all 20 bags in the store arrive.

The report said one cash bag was missing but had been checked off as being placed in the company safe.

UVic Program Worth Repeat

By BILL THOMAS

There are plain concerts, fancy concerts, good concerts and evenings of real musical communication. We enjoyed one of the latter Monday when the University of Victoria Chorus and Orchestra offered Faure's Requiem and Poulenc's Gloria.

The 250 singers and musicians conquered the terrible acoustics of the university gym under the direction of George Corwin to produce a beautiful sound.

For my part, I would consider the Sanctus in the Requiem as the most memorable choral offering of recent seasons. It was performed with a transparent, ascending quality that carried the full spiritual meaning of this classic work.

Soloist Charles Dorrington was unable to negotiate the sound chamber effects of the old airplane hangar and his voice suggests he is far more comfortable in his upper register than in the baritone section he is tagged with.

Dorrington is a tenor at heart and he hasn't the power to defeat his surroundings. His control is excellent and his tone pleasing but he needs more horsepower in his attack if he is to work in such surroundings.

Soprano Audrey Farnell did win and came through beautifully. She has the voice, command and presence to carry off her role in this work.

Poulenc's Gloria was composed in 1959 and is in a modern, almost pop, idiom. His music carries a clown-like gaiety that is the veneer to a sadness and pathos that was effectively read by all the musicians.

Miss Farnell's offering of the Pie Jesu was a truly moving musical moment. She has a subtle soprano quite devoid of those tedious histrionics that plague some singers. She seems content to allow her voice to rest on its merit and her decision is a good one

The In Paradisum which concluded the Requiem was a fine effort by the 170 singers. The chorus is well balanced and shows a feeling of excitement coupled with tight discipline for which Corwin must take credit.

The cavernous gym was filled to standing room which suggests that the concert might be worth repeating. It was held to support the Taylor Scholarship Fund for deserving students of music.

Radiologist Honored

Dr. Frank Stuart, director of radiology at St. Joseph's Hospital, today will be named a fellow of the American College of Radiology at the organization's 48th annual meeting in St. Louis, Mo.

An announcement says he is being honored for "his outstanding work in medicine and for his contribution to radiology."

The college is a professional medical society of about 8,000 physicians who specialize in the use of x-rays and other radioactive substances for diagnostic and therapeutic purposes.

Follow the leader, Datsun 1600
Try it.
You're following a car with a list of rally wins as long as an elephant's memory. You're following a car that slides through little side streets like a greased eel. A car with the poke to put you where you want to be on the freeway. Out in front. So don't just follow the leader. Drive a Datsun 1600, and let everyone else follow you.

Here's what you see from the inside: Everything. You've got fantastic all-round visibility. Plus a list of extras that don't cost extra: Contoured bucket seats (reclining in four-door sedan and wagon). Flow through ventilation. Tinted glass. 3-speed heater/defroster. Collapsible safety steering column. Headrests, harnesses and a padded dash all wrapped up in a solid unit body construction for your own safety and protection. All-synchro 4-on-the-floor is standard, 3-speed automatic an optional extra.

Here's what you get on the outside: Front disc brakes that stop you straight and sure. All-independent suspension that irons out the roughest road. Smart styling, in two doors, four doors or a wagon and a range of colours that may just make it the most visible car on the road.

Here's what you see under the hood: A 1600 cc 96 hp. 5-main-bearing overhead camshaft engine that's designed for 100,000 mile reliability and squeezes up to 35 miles from a gallon of gas. Dual barrel carb. Alternator. Independent light fuse system.

Here's where you can see it: At any of 250 Datsun dealers all across Canada. Any one of them will be happy to arrange a test-drive. Datsun 1600. It's a tough act to follow.

Lake's Problem Is a Beauty

Victoria's Thetis Lake Park, which should come under jurisdiction of Capital Region Board, according to chairman Hugh Curtis, is having hard time living up to reputation given it in sign. Victoria council was told earlier this month park's appearance was deterorating and $35,000 was needed for immediate improvements. Bid was voted down on basis other municipalities should also pay share of park's upkeep. Meanwhile, shutters on park's concession booth provide expanse for graffiti creators.

Urban Renewal Funds: Can Victoria Be Sure?

By HUBERT BEYER

Victoria's plans for the Inner Harbor stand or fall with a decision expected to be handed down by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell at the end of April.

That decision will be all about money — urban renewal money — that the city needs to turn its plans for the Inner Harbor into reality.

Campbell has said Victoria will get a slice of a $3.5 million urban renewal fund set aside for two projects in Vancouver if Vancouver fails to submit definite proposals for its projects by the end of April.

But informed city hall sources indicate Campbell may decide to let Victoria have the requested funds even if Vancouver does submit its plans in time.

City's Hopes

On that possibility ride Victoria's hopes to get its hands on about $1 million for the purchase of the Ocean Cement property on Wharf Street, which is considered the key to the city's Inner Harbor renewal plans.

The city intends to convert the site into a public marina and park, hoping such a facelift would attract private investment.

No official figures regarding a price for that property have been released, but it is believed to be about $1 million.

"We can't swing it alone," Victoria Ald. Harold Olafson, chairman of the city's community development committee, told the Colonist Monday.

Mainland Man

"We need that urban renewal money and I'm confident we'll get it," he added.

That view isn't shared by Vancouver officials. Vancouver Ald. Harry Rankin told the Colonist earlier this month there wasn't a chance Victoria would get those funds. Vancouver's plans, he said, were well advanced, and would be submitted to the provincial government long before the April 30 deadline.

But Olafson remained optimistic.

"I have no doubts that we'll get the money from the province," he said. (Under the federal government's urban renewal progam, pojects are financed on a three-way basis with Ottawa paying 50 per cent, the province 25 per cent and the municipality 25 per cent).

Meanwhile, Vancouver developer J. A. Reid is still waiting in the wings with his proposed $25 million Reid Centre to be built on Wharf below Bastion Square.

Reid wasn't available for comment Monday, but has said earlier he is still willing to go ahead with his proposed hotel-apartment complex.

Olafson said, "If it isn't Reid it'll be someone else," but he hoped Reid would eventually proceed with his plans.

Vote Proposal

He didn't say what would happen if Campbell decided not to let Victoria have the urban renewal money. All he would say was "I told you I'm confident."

Reid has stated he won't go ahead unless Ocean Cement is moving out of the area. He said he will start as soon as possible after the city has reached an agreement with the cement plant officials.

Last week, the Victoria Chamber of Commerce urged the city to stop stalling the Reid plan. Members passed a resolution asking city council to put the project to a vote.

But from another quarter came a warning during the weekend not to implement any major development proposals without careful consideration of their effect on the old part of Victoria.

The group voicing its opposition to hasty development at the Inner Harbor calls itself the Old Town steering committee.

Consisting of architectural students from the University of British Columbia, the group is preparing a brief outlining the possibilities of student involvement in the Old Town area (between Government and the Inner Harbor) as part of the federal gam.

In Old Town

Olafson said he wasn't very impressed by the group's criticism. The buildings in Old Town could well be renovated by their owners, he said.

"These students — what are they, second-year architecture students? — they get here at the 11th hour and tell us to save the old buildings downtown," he said.

"Why should the city pay for renovating these houses? Why don't the owners? And just because they're old, that doesn't mean they're beautiful."

Suite Profit Shaky

The recently-formed Greater Victoria Apartment Owners' Association has developed a number of aims and objectives, president J. W. Dickie, 4030 Locarno Lane, said Sunday.

Lawmakers and the public often assume all property owners are wealthy "landlords" and should be an easy source of more and more taxes, Dickie said in an interview.

"Many do not understand that profit in this business is often a touch-and-go proposition," he said.

Some of the other points he made:

● GVAOA co-operates with other property owners in opposing unfair taxes as well as tax-free competition. It co-operates with but does not surrender to government controls and operation.

Dickie said the ability of the individual to properly protect his interest is "rapidly disappearing, and that only through co-ordinated action by a strong organization can the owners' rights be protected."

"In this respect GVAOA has the respect and consideration of local and government agencies in matters affecting the apartment industry."

● Active, experienced committees are working on such matters as taxes, legislation and legal problems and the advisability of approaching municipalities on the subject of setting up landlord and tenant advisory committees.

● Advice on rental problems is available from the association. An experienced staff will be on standby to assist members with the complex requirements of the laws and with solutions based on long experience and constant contact.

● The association has prepared copies of standard rental forms with uniform rules and regulations printed on the back.

"Use of this form helps create a better understanding with renters and contributes to more efficient management," Dickie said.

● Attractive discounts will be available to members on services and supplies, such as paint, fuel, etc., and the association will work to extend these benefits on an even wider range.

Dickie also had a personal observation to make on a matter of damage deposits, a sore point with some tenants and landlords in Victoria, where damage deposits are illegal. In Vancouver, they're legal by order of Vancouver council.

He said Gerald Ledain (of Ledain drug commission fame) recently touched on the subject of damage deposits.

According to Dickie, Ledain felt the damage deposit was a benefit to prospective young renters with families who may not appear to be good tenants but who, by putting up a deposit, were able to secure accommodation by showing they wanted to act "in good faith."

And in Victoria, a number of tenants have said they would prefer damage deposits because then they'd know "where we stand," and if they damaged a suite, they wouldn't have to worry about raising the money for repairs.

The next regular meeting of the Victoria association is April 5 at YMCA, but is restricted to members. However, those wanting to join prior to the meeting can either contact Dickie at 382-4312 or write to GVAOA, Box 5235, Postal Station B, Victoria, B.C.

Breakwater

Joint Call For Study

The chairman of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club breakwater committee joined with some of his colleagues and members of the Oak Bay Beach Protection Association Sunday in calling for a hydraulic study to be conducted before a proposed breakwater is built in Cadboro Bay.

"We voted independently, but I think we were representing the yacht club," the committee chairman, John Graeme, said in an interview Monday.

"We're in complete accord with the (association's) point of view that we have to preserve our natural resources for everyone and we think we've been trying to do this . . .

"I don't think it's necessary, but we're not fighting a reasonable proposition."

Graeme said that unless costs and time required for such a study proved to be prohibitive, the RVYC would likely be willing to have one conducted.

The motion, unanimously passed by about 50 persons attending the OBBPA meeting, calls on Oak Bay municipal council to withhold approval "of any proposal . . . unless such a proposal is accompanied by a thorough hydraulic study prepared by an independent hydraulic laboratory showing with all possible accuracy the ecological effects of such a breakwater on the environment of Cadboro Bay."

N. J. Dixon, acting chairman of the group, said the basic issue "and it was very evident right from the beginning of the meeting, centred around the environmental and ecological aspects of the yacht club proposal."

He said several persons from Saanich, including a representative of the Cadboro Bay Ratepayers' Association, attended the meeting, which also set up a steering committee to consider various proposals set forward Sunday.

Graeme said the 12 club members who attended were there as observers and thus did not try to explain why they thought a hydraulic study would not be necessary.

He explained, Monday, however, that tidal rates in the bay are less than the one-half knot speed that would be required before erosion could take place.

The breakwater, as proposed, would be open-ended anyway, he said, so the almost negligible tidal action would not be interfered with.

Graeme said further that both the B.C. Towboat Owners' Association and booming operators have written in their submissions to the federal transport department regarding the breakwater proposal that "our differences can be worked out at the time of design."

The towboat owners and Greater Victoria Mill Operators Associations had said last week the proposal could cause more damage to booms towed into the bay to avoid sudden storms than that currently done by waves.

Graeme said the breakwater could actually help the companies because existing dolphins, to which booms are moored, could be embedded in its base, strengthening them and putting an end to the problem of them being knocked out.

The suggestion that booms would now suffer double the damage because waves would strike the breakwater and bounce back is not valid, he said.

The proposed breakwater location, Graeme said, would be along such lines that waves would tend to "bounce along it and rebound would be minor."

He also attacked suggestions that increased moorage would lead to increased sewage pollution in the bay.

'Bright Word for All'

"No matter how gloomy things were, Bob always had a bright word for us all," E. T. Staley said of Bob Milliken, right, as 50 friends gathered at Quadra Street Union Centre Sunday to honor Milliken. Milliken, retiring business agent with Teamsters after 20 years, holds suitcase, one of several gifts presented to him and his wife by unionists. Staley, of Victoria, is former president of B.C. Federation of Labor. — (William A. Boucher)

ALL SORTS: Justice has triumphed! The winning TV commercial in the 11th annual U.S. broadcast industry contest was Alka Seltzer's "Mama mia, that's-a some spicy meatball." The choice was made even though Alka Seltzer fired the ad agency for lack of sales.

Latest ratings show ABC swept every time slot on three nights in one week (Sunday, Tuesday and Friday in the last week of February) for the first time. Season averages now are CBS 19.8, NBC 19.6, ABC 17.5.

CBS says the audience for the movie Ben Hur Feb. 14 was 86 million — the most for any network entertainment program in history . . . A note to Mrs. Edward Maw and Mrs. Janet Moss: I'll have copies made of your letters and send them to the presidents of the CBC and CTV networks. Let me know when you get answers.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Saturday's answer — I've often wondered what would happen if I said I'd forgotten the answer. Anyway, this one asked the names of the four original Rowan and Martin kooks still on Laugh-In: Ruth Buzzi, Henry Gibson, Arte Johnson and Gary Owens. Only Buzzi and Owens may be left next season.

Today's question begins a silly series about people whose names have a connection. All you have to do is identify their occupations, and the first batch should explain it — Jerry West, Alex North, Ann Sothern and Clint Eastwood. Answers Wednesday.

"You have been listening to a message from your Heart Association. Now, in keeping with our policy of granting equal time . . ."

Tuesday Highlights

C-7:30 p.m. — Reach for the Top: Oak Bay vs. Esquimalt — 2.

C-8:00 — A 30-minute CBC special from a recent rock-gospel concert in a Toronto Roman Catholic church, starring singer Tobi Lark — 2, 6.

C-8:00 — I think I'll watch an hour special, about Scotland Yard, in hopes of seeing George Gideon — 5.

C-8:30 — Telescope profiles Anne Murray — 2, 6.

C-10:00 — Tuesday Night is about Prairie Indians' life — 2, 6.

CABLE 10 — 7:00 p.m., Ladies First; 7:30, Project Travel; 8:00, Comparisons; 8:30, Outdoorsmen, hunting and fishing; 9:00, You and the Law, with Saanich police; 9:30, the Helen Biernes Outlook show.

Tuesday Movies

C-9:00 a.m.—Seven Men from Now (1956 Randolph Scott). Brucie's Laws, starting today, will be from the recent contest and are all Edward Narroway daffy definitions, like: A Locomotive is a creazy reason—4.

C-12:45 noon—The Smugglers (1968 made-for-TV suspense, not much), Shirely Booth, Carol Lynley, good support—6, 8.

4:00 p.m.—Mother Didn't Tell Me (terrible 1951 romanticomedy), Dorothy McGuire, June Haver. Brucie's Law: The daffy definition of polygamy is this parrot stinks—7.

4:00—Girls' Town (1942). So does this film—13.

5:30—Return to Treasure Island (1954, my candidate for history's worst film of any kind), Tab Hunter, Dawn Addams—12.

C-8:30—The Sheriff (new black-marshal western, could be good), Ossie Davis, his wife Ruby Dee, Ross Martin—4.

C-9:00—Big Country (fairly good 1958 outdoors action, part two), Gregory Peck, Charlton Heston, billions more—5.

11:00—Shadow Man (sub-par 1953 English detective), Cesar Romero. Of interest only because of the early Kay Kendall—13.

● 11:50—The Magician (1958 Ingmar Bergman, one of his best)—2.

C-12:00—Black Sabbath (1964 horror trilogy, not too bad). Brucie's Law: Cross-Pollination is a country full of angry parrots—6.

1:00 a.m.—Behind Prison Walls (1943 No)—13.

1:05—Cashah (hilariously bad 1948 cheapo), Yvonne DeCarlo, Tony Martin. Brucie's last Law today: The daffy definition of disavow is it's an Italian oath—12.

Tuesday Radio

7:10—Bright Lights: Gordon Lightfoot—CBU (690).

8:00—CBC Tuesday Night is all about Canadian composer Murray Adaskin—CBU.

8:00—A Montreal orchestra concert, led by Zubin Mehta: Brahms' second symphony—CBU-FM (105.7).

8:05—Gala includes Mendelssohn's Midsummer Night's Dream music, which is good any time of the year—CFMA (98.5).

● 8:30—Game No. 5 of the B.C. junior hockey playoffs, Chilliwack at Victoria—CPVI (900).

● Recommended; C Color.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD and BEE SCHENKEN

Of all the women bridge players we have encountered around and about the tournaments of the world, there are very few with such an accomplished technique as Florida's Barbara Brier, who won the mixed pairs championship of the world last summer in partnership with New York's Waldemar von Zedwitz.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South

Opening lead: King of hearts.

We happen to have a particularly soft spot for Barbara because, as a matter of fact, she was Bee's very first woman partner when Bee first started playing tournament bridge back in the late 1950s.

This deal shows Barbara bringing home a contract that many players would go down in. It is certainly likely that most declarers would win the heart opening, draw trumps, and endeavor to gain an eleventh trick either by means of a successful diamond finesse or by banking on East to have the ace of clubs.

Barbara, however, spotted a much more promising method of play, based on the idea of trying to establish the diamonds without permitting East to gain the lead to play a club through.

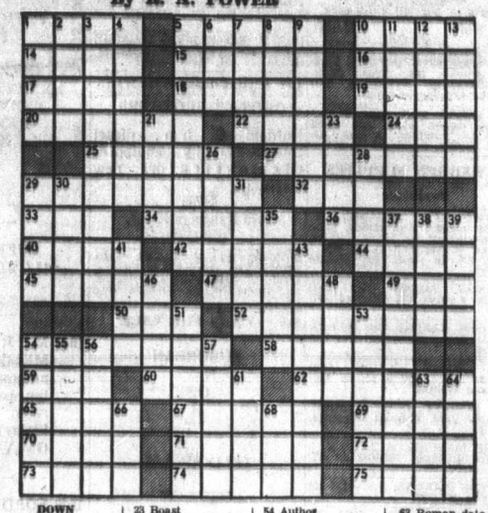

In line with this, Barbara allowed the king of hearts to hold the first trick. West could do no better than to shift to a trump, and Barbara won it, led a diamond to the ace, discarded a diamond on the ace of hearts and ruffed a diamond.

She then entered dummy twice more in trumps to ruff diamonds, and still had an entry — in the shape of a trump — enabling her to cash the established diamond and make the contract in the smoothest possible manner.

Missing Plane Sought

CAMPBELL RIVER — An air and sea serach was scheduled to begin at daybreak today for a small plane with two Campbell River men aboard reported missing on a 60-mile flight Monday afternoon.

The Pacific Rescue Centre, Victoria, identified the two aboard the plane as the pilot, Gordon Jeune, 39, and a passenger whose name was given only as H. Young.

A rescue centre spokesman said the float-equipped Cessna 180 left Monday morning on a circle flight from Campbell River, to Okeover Arm on the Mainland, to Grassy Creek near the north end of the Island, Topaze Harbor on the Mainland north of Johnstone Strait, and back to Campbell River.

Owners of the plane, Trans-Mountain Air Services, reported it overdue when it had not returned to Campbell River by 4:10 p.m.

Investigation by the rescue centre showed the plane had reached Okeover Arm and had left there to fly to Grassy Creek about 12:30 p.m. But it had never arrived at Grassy Creek.

The rescue centre estimated it would take the Cessna, cruising at about 100 miles an hour, a little over half an hour to make the flight.

A Labrador helicopter and a Buffalo aircraft from CFB Comox made a brief search of the area Monday night. They will be joined today by the Coast Guard cutter Ready.

Teacher Sent For Trial

DUNCAN — A Cowichan school district junior high school teacher has been remanded to April 30 for trial after he pleaded not guilty to a charge of unlawfully causing bodily harm to a student by allegedly striking him in the face with his fist.

Shellac Kills Two Inmates

AGASSIZ, (CP) — Two inmates of the Agassiz Mountain Prison died Monday after they drank shellac, which contains methyl alcohol. John Thomas Bendell, 50, and Vernon Levy, 41, died in hospital in Vancouver. A prison spokesman said inmates are allowed small quantities of shellac and paint thinners for work on hobbies. He said no other prisoners were believed involved.

Congress Eve

Another Blast At China

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Publication a new blast against China on the eve of the Soviet Communist party's 24th congress, which opens today, left no doubt of the dim view the Kremlin takes of the current state of its relations with Peking.

The attack, accusing Chinese leaders of continuing their splittisg activities, was written by Polish Communist chief Edward Gierek and printed in Pravda, the Soviet party daily.

The choice of an East European leader to write such an article may indicate that Soviet leaders themselves — while fully endorsing his comments — will be more restrained during the congress, observers said.

A Soviet party official confirmed Monday that party leader Leonid Brezhsev will deliver his keynote report on the opening day.

High-level delegations from China's two small Communist neighbors, North Vietnam and North Korea, are attending the congress, although no Chinese delegation will be present.

Both these parties would be in a position of considerable embarrassment if Brezhnev launched into a public diatribe against Peking.

Another thorny question likely to be treated only in an oblique fashion is that of Jewish emigration.

Television Cameras To Rescue

NEMACOLIN, Pa. (UPI) — Rescuers drilled deep into a soft-coal mine Monday and prepared to lower television cameras 400 feet underground to scan a tunnel for two veteran miners trapped for three days by flames and smoke.

Mine experts, using the most modern rescue equipment available, have been frustrated repeatedly in attempts to contact Richard Randolph, 63, and Charles Gibson Sr., 64, or even to determine whether they were still alive.

With time becoming a critical factor, two drilling rigs bored nine-inch holes toward an area where officials believe the men would have fled to evade the fire.

When the drills break through into the tunnel area, the television cameras, equipped with powerful lights, will be lowered inside the mine shaft. Monitors above ground will be eagerly scanned for some clue to the fate of Gibson and Randolph.

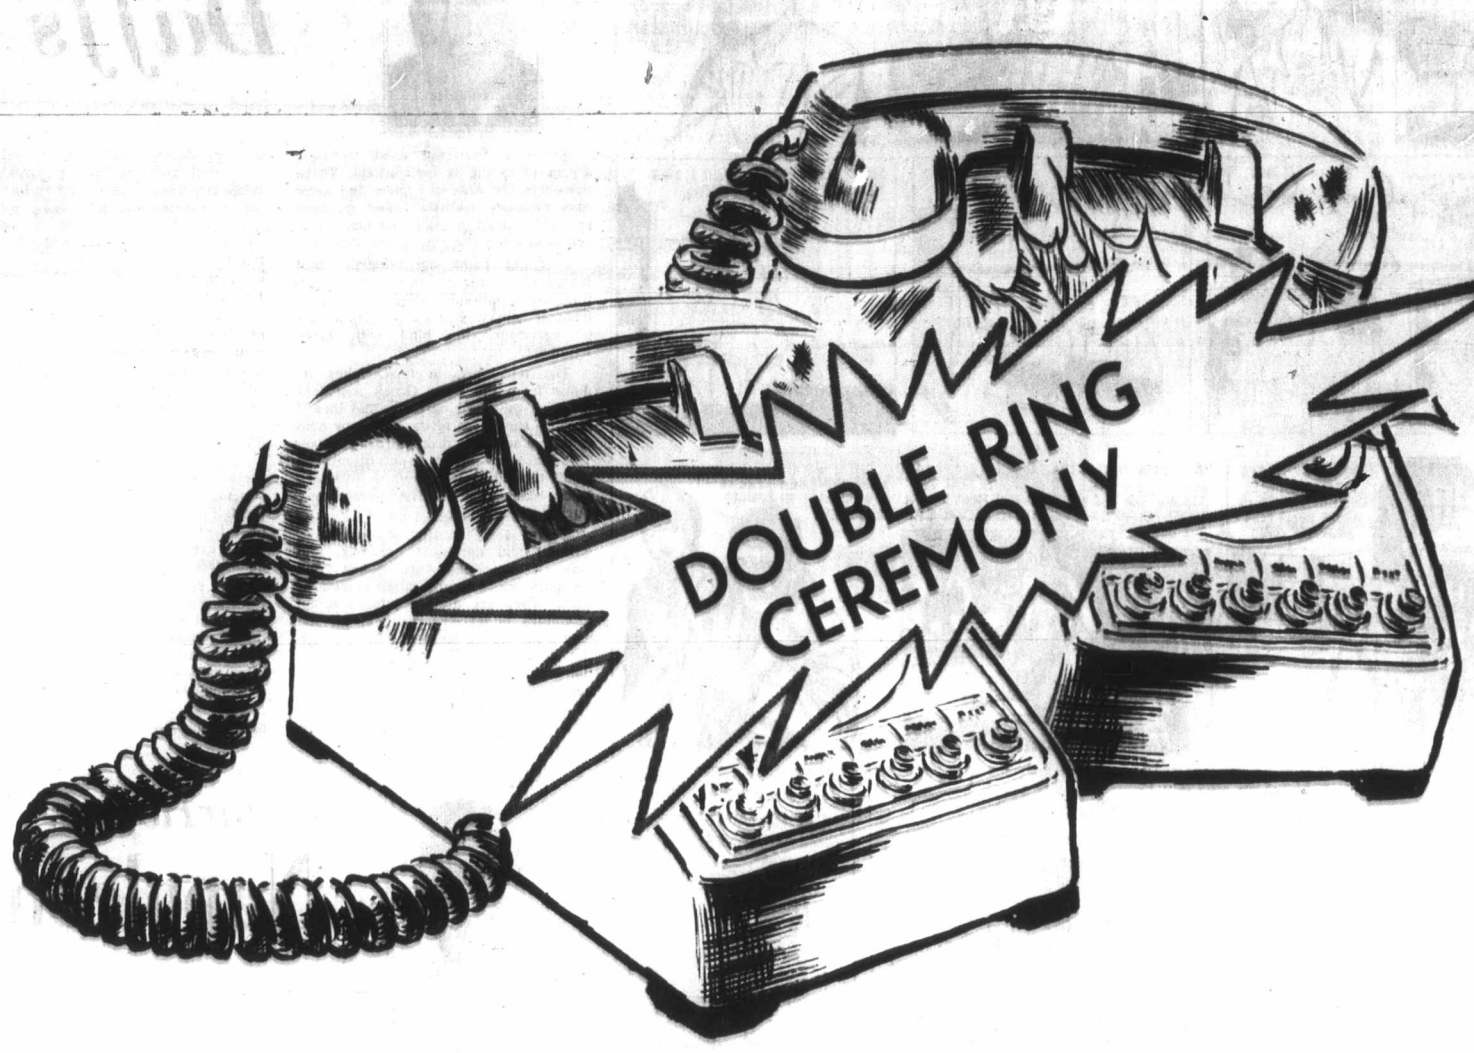

Ship Snaps, 31 Missing

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (UPI) — A merchants vessel pulled two crewmen from the cold Atlantic Monday to bring to 13 the number of survivors of the tanker Texaco Oklahoma, which snapped in two and went down in heavy seas with 44 men aboard. Eleven of the crewmen were picked up from life rafts Sunday by the Liberian tanker Sasstown, off the North Carolina coast. A further 31 are missing.

Plan Creates Marsh Shore

VANCOUVER (CP) — Eight projects to flood 3,000 acres and create about 50 miles of marsh shoreline in B.C. have been announced by Ducks Unlimited (Canada).

At Leach Lake in the Creston Marshes, about $90,000 will be spent to flood about 2,000 acres.

Daffs Tra-la

Seems to me the most welcome flower of spring is the daffodil. There are earlier flowers, of course, and some may be more beautiful, more fragrant or more varied in color, but none is so representative of spring as the daffodil.

I should point out, though, that botanically speaking, there is no such thing as a daffodil — this is merely a term of convenience for a certain kind of narcissus, the kind with large trumpets.

The narcissus, in turn, takes its name from the same Greek root that gives us the word narcotic, and this is because the juices of the narcissus bulb contain a soporific drug called narceine. The narcotic effect was discovered when the bulbs were fed to livestock facing starvation in The Netherlands during the last war.

There are literally thousands of daffodil and narcissus varieties, and only a specialist can know and recognize more than a small portion of them. They are divided into 11 broad groupings or classes, ranging all the way from the big trumpet daffs through the dainty jonquils to a tiny green-flowered narcissus which blooms in the autumn — a rare creature in our part of the world.

I don't think there is any more accommodating plant than the daffodil — it will grow practically anywhere. While it prefers a deep and rather stiff soil, it will perform suprisingly well in light, sandy loam, and while you need a site in full sun to produce the earliest flowers, you can still grow daffs in light or partial shade, although blooming will be later.

One of my neighbors has a great bed of them on the north side of a rock wall, enjoying sunlight only in early morning and late afternoon, and he is still picking bunches of the golden flowers long after they are finished in sunnier gardens; he gets longer stems, too.

Anyone can grow these lovely flowers — once — by simply buying and bunging some bulbs into the ground in the fall of the year. The real trick is to have them come back bigger and better than ever, and in ever-increasing quantities, year after year.

The point to keep always in the forefront of your mind is that the really important time in the life of the bulb is the two-month period after the flowers fade. Unfortunately, this is the time after the flowers finish — when we are most inclined to neglect our daffs.

As I have pointed out many times before, the green leaves of any plant are food factories, powered by the sun, manufacturing nutrients to plump up the bulb for next year's flowers. The whole trick in ensuring a repeat performance of this year's floral display is to keep the foliage green and healthy and in good operating condition as late into the spring as possible.

The surest way to starve your bulbs is to tidy up the daffodil site after the flowers finish by cutting down the tops. All the fertilizer in the world won't do the bulbs a bit of good unless the plants have plenty of green foliage.

And while a daffodil bulb enjoys a good baking in the sun and in dry soil during its misdummer resting period, it must have ample moisture during the immediate post-bloom period when it is recharging its batteries for next year's work.

It is a good idea, too, after the flowers fade, to take some precautions against the narcissus bulb fly, the most common pest of daffs. This fly lays her eggs in the soil alongside the daffs, and these eggs hatch into maggots which penetrate and feed on the bulbs.

The best weapon I have found against these grubs is 5 per cent chlordane dust, sprinkled on the foliage and on the soil around and between your daffs, scratching it shallowly into the soil.

Napoleon Explains

PARIS, December 19, 1812 — Reports that France's Grand Army had retreated from Moscow in disarray were vigorously denied today by government spokesmen.

A war ministry official said the army had merely engaged in "mobile manoeuvres" and that everything was "going according to plan." He said French troops were "moving swiftly westward in orderly fashion" and the enemy was "following in great confusion."

Meanwhile, Emperor Napoleon, who returned to Paris yesterday well ahead of his soldiers, remained cheerful and optimistic. He said he could now see "the end of the tunnel."

The emperor modestly declined to describe the Russian operation as a victory, saying it could not be assessed in "traditional terms." Its purpose, he told an interviewer, "was not to conquer territory, nor destroy an army, but simply to disrupt enemy supply lines and thus insure the safety of our French boys in Central Europe."

He said that "considerable progress" had been made "toward achieving those goals," pointing out that Moscow itself had been captured and burned and "vast quantities of Russian arms seized" — "arms that will no longer kill French soldiers."

Moreover, he said, Russian losses were five times French losses "by conservative estimates."

The emperor refused to set a firm date for the total withdrawal of all French troops from Central Europe "even though it would be very popular for me to do so."

He said such a move would sabotage peace talks with the Russians and the Prussians. Nor, he said, would he unilaterally withdraw the remaining French troops, "even though, politically, there is a great temptation to do it."

"After all of this sacrifice and all of his effort, if France, right at the time we are winding down this war and bringing our men home, were to throw in the towel, then we would suffer a blow all over the world," he said.

Peace, too, would suffer a blow, he added, for France "is the greatest peace-keeping nation in the world today."

At the same time, Napoleon urged Frenchmen to remain confident. He said the "limited Russian incursion" had delayed the enemy "at least six weeks."

The emperor decried eyewitness reports that the Grand Army had panicked during the mobile manoeuvring. He said he had been assured by Marshal Ney that 18 out of every 22 battalions had manoeuvred well. The eye witnesses, he said, just happened to see the other four.

"I know what's going on," he said firmly. "We have a plan. It is being implemented." Moreover, he said proudly, the withdrawal of French troops from Russia "is proceeding well ahead of schedule."

Napoleon's candid assessment of the Russian incursion did much to ease growing French disquietude over the seemingly endless war.

Indeed, several of his ministers urged him to begin construction of a second Arc de Triomphe over the Champs Elysees to commemorate "the brilliant completion" of his Russian campaign.

With unexpected humility, the emperor declined. "There will be many more glorious successes" he pledged, "like this."

They're Like Wow

Wait'll you see Pat Neal in The Road Builder, which will be released soon. The story, written by Pat's husband, Ronald Dahl, includes several very intense love scenes. Pat's partner is young actor Nicholas Clay and they come off like wow together on the screen. Pat, who was so terribly ill several years ago, has never looked lovelier or more radiant than she does now.

A major magazine is featuring Twiggy, yesterday's modelling rage, in a photo layout. Actually, Twiggy hasn't changed all that much since she was the darling of so many with her no-curve body and her eyelashes that had bigger measurements than her bust. Twiggy's still a skinny, little kid, as you'll see for yourself when Boyfriend hits the theatres. It starts rolling in England next month.

Making it triple-play time for MGM (The Road Builder and Boyfriend are their babies), that studio does its part to see that the "mob" takes over New York next month. Scheduled for shooting in Manhattan then is The Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight, from the Jimmy Breslin book, with a similar story line to The Godfather. With both the Gang and the Godfather production crews in Manhattan at the same time, it'll be difficult to tell who are the muggers and who are the actors.

Don't get the idea that Leigh Taylor-Young is all shook up about her marital discord with Ryan O'Neal. It's been a long time coming, even before Barbara Streisand entered the scene. And Leigh hasn't exactly been just sitting around the house alone and pouting.

Angela Lansbury has shaken her disappointment over her Broadway-bound Pretty Belle folding during Boston tryouts. After treating herself to a trip to Ireland to recuperate from the blow of the fallen Belle, she returned to Hollywood to hear good news: She gets to head back to her favored Emerald Isle again this summer.

Disney Studios is so high on Angela's Bedknobs and Broomsticks they're planning to premiere it in Blighty in July. The $7,000,000 Broomsticks is Disney's most costly ever, and said to be Angela's biggest tour de force. Bigger even than her on-the-boards rendition of Auntie Mame.

Lawrence Welk is disturbed over what's happening to violins. He says that with the way youngsters seem only interested in learning to play guitars nowadays, within 15 years there will be no one playing the violin. I mentioned Lawrence's feeling to young actor-musician Jeff Bridges who says there's nothing to sweat about. "A lot of teens are taking up the electric violin now," he revealed. Somehow I don't think that bit of electrified knowledge will make Lawrence Welk any happier.

Director Bud Boetticher heads for Mexico soon to begin production on The Highrollers. Still gathering dust, and still one of the current classic filmland mysteries, is a film Bud completed several years ago, a documentary on the life of bullfighting great Carlos Azurra. Boetticher went through a lot to get that picture completed, including erasing the narration voice track provided by one super star, then hiring Anthony Quinn as a replacement. It's a touchy subject with Bud.

Sally Field and her husband Steve Craig are determined they'll show the world she's grown up. With Steve serving as writer-director, they're putting together some mini-movies starring the former Gidget, one-time Flying Nun as a divorcee, a doctor and even, by golly, as a courtesan.

It's a disappointment for Rod Steiger, Ernest Hemingway's widow, Mary, is adamant at this time about not wanting anyone to play her late husband, including Rod, who had his heart set on starring in the film production. Not that Rod is wanting for work. He signed to star in the film adaptation of the Broadway show, Happy Birthday, Wanda June. And, if it makes Rod feel any better, in Happy Birthday, he'll play a Hemingway-like writer-author who returns from safari to find his and the entire world changed. If Steiger had his druthers, he'd get a chance to play a romantic hero someday. But he doubts that wish will ever come true. As he put it, "My biggest problem is that I look like everybody's father because of my size and weight. Stanley Hoff in The Big Knife was supposed to be in his 50s. I was 30 when I played him. Nazerman, the pawnbroker, was in his early 60s. I was 38."

Rafer Johnson has locked himself in his study to finish his original screen play about that slice of Old West life he feels has escaped most history books. The story of the original black cowboys.

Qhen I visited Dinah Shore's Place, for the show which airs on NBC April 15, Dinah chatted about how women can combine family responsibilities and careers, if they're really sincere in their desire to have a life outside the home. Dinah does it, of course, and so do scores of others. And now Mrs. Jerry Lewis has joined the ranks. I asked Patti what possessed her to open her new "Patchwork" needlework shop. She explained that the children were growing up and she felt she needed an outside interest. She loves doing needlework and so that seemed the natural way to go. The Lewises have four of their six sons still living at home; they range in age from six to 15.

Christine Jorgenson has a new fellow, too, it seems. She wandered in to catch John Rowles shoe at the Las Vegas Flamingo earlier this month with Ken Baxter on her arm. John tells me that when he chatted with Christine after the show and asked how her autobiography was coming, she admitted, "Very slowly. If I don't finish it I can always go back to plumbing." Christine did some plumbing when she was still a he.

Too Many Entertained, Says Actor-Producer

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) -- Paul Henreid, actor, director, producer, setforth an arresting theory on the low estate of show business, observing there is an ecological imbalance in entertainment just as in nature.

Essentially he says there are too many persons being entertained.

But it is his thesis that while the air we breathe is polluted with hydrocarbons and photochemicals, so is it alive with deadly — well, noxious — television shows and radio rock music.

A member of Hollywood's acting fraternity for 30 years, Henreid observed, "Television is the matter with Hollywood. Any art form which must appeal to a great many persons cannot have great quality.

"In television's early days only professional men, white-collar workers and other educated men could afford TV sets.

"They were entertained every week by as many as 20 fine anthologies: Playhouse 90, Robert Montgomery Presents, Suspense Theatre, Alfred Hitchcock, Climax, Alcoa Theatre and many more.

"The writers were literate and the dramas and comedies well conceived.

"But more prosperity gave the lower-education classes the opportunity to buy television sets. They wanted The Beverly Hillbillies not Playhouse 90.

"The result is all too apparent today. The same is true of the theatre and motion pictures. As affluence increases quality diminishes.

"Gradually television has become the mass medium. It is similar to the pulp magazines of 50 years ago. That is my feeling, at least, and I think I'm correct about it.

"But we must also remember that in any period in history there has always been only a few fine artists, actors, sculptors, writers and musicians. Today there is a greater need for more of them to provide for the larger, more affluent population."

Henreid doesn't advocate an economic depression in order that the arts may bloom. He believes instead that the arts should maintain a higher standard.

"Leisure time occupations of people in Europe and the United States have hurt the theatre and motion pictures," he said. "People are skiing, boating, golfing, camping, buying vacation homes.

"And, finally, movies have hurt themselves. Audiences have changed but producers, exhibitors and distributors have not. I think I can prove that 90 per cent of pictures made abroad are flops in this country, especially English-made films.

"Yet Hollywood producers stubbornly return abroad again and again. What good is it to save money there and then fail at the box office here?

"Quality entertainment will always succeed. Anything less is an affront to audiences of every economic and social level."

Heavenly Match

Actor Bob Cummings, 60, married his secretary Regina (Gigi) Fong, 32 Saturday in Las Vegas at 11:34 a.m.—time astrologers assured would be most propitious. Candlelight, double ring ceremony, was Cumming's fourth marriage.—(AP)

Cowboy Makes Grand Entrance

EDMONTON (CP) — Singing cowboy Rex Allen Sunday made what was considered to be the most spectacular entrance of his show business career.

He landed in a heap on the floor but picked himself up and admitted afterward:

"That's the first time that has ever happened to me."

Company and Sleuth Take Tony Honors

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway has bestowed its 1971 Tony Awards on Company as the best musical and Sleuth as the best play.

Top individual acting trophies were won by Maureen Stapleton and Brian Bedford for drama, and Helen Gallagher and Hal Linden in the song-and-dance department.

The Tony awards are given for Broadway shows.

The 25th-anniversary presentations of the silver medallions for distinguished achievement were made Sunday night during a two-hour-plus telecast from the Palace Theatre over the ABC network during which a stellar galaxy performed hit songs from past musical champions.

There weren't any real surprises among the winners — voted on by about 450 representatives of stage guilds, craft unions and the press. But the loudest ovations greeted the awards to three veteran actresses, Miss Stapleton, Miss Gallagher and Patsy Kelly.

Miss Stapleton, honored for her portrayal in the Gingerbread Lady, won a Tony previously in 1951. Miss Gallagher, of No, No, Nanette, also got a Tony for supporting work back in 1952.

"This really is for us who stuck on and on," Miss Gallagher said as she clutched her new trophy.

For Miss Kelly, taking the supporting musical actress award for No, No, Nanette, there was special sentimental significance, for it was at the Palace when she was 12 that she made her New York debut in a vaudeville chorus.

In addition to the award as best musical, Company scooped up five other Tonys: for best book, by George Furth; best music and lyrics separate citations, Stephen Sondheim; scenic design, Boris Aronson; and Hal Prince, the director-producer.

The show, which opened last April 24 after the Tony voting deadline, previously was named the best musical of 1970 by the New York Drama Critics Circle.

Four prizes were picked up by No, No, Nanette. Besides the pair for distaff performances, Donald Saddler was named for best choreography, and Raoul Pene du Bois for costumes.

The Tony Award to Linden was the second to The Rothschilds, as Keene Curtis took the award for supporting actor in a musical.

Bedford, starring in The School for Wives, was one of three English winners. The others were Sleuth, written by Anthony Shaffer; and Peter Brook, best director for A Midsummer Night's Dream performed by members of the Royal Shakespeare Company.

The other competitive awards were won by Paul Sand, dramatic supporting actor; and R. H. Poindexter, lighting design, both for Story Theatre; and by Rae Allen, supporting dramatic actress in And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little.

Honorary Tony citations were presented to Elliot Norton, Boston drama critic; Roger Stevens, former chairman of the National Council for the Arts; Ingram Ash, theatrical advertising executive; and John Kluge, publisher of Playbill.

A Sign of the Times?

Traffic sign at Montreal and Dallas Road might be confusing to most drivers, and apparently Holly Byron of Ganges seems to find something unusual. But any driver who was to back up one-way street, could conceivably be doing no more than the sign orders if entering means going forward.—(Ellis Shipman)

Provincial COURT

A 37-year-old Victoria man who returned to the scene of the crime once too often, pleaded guilty Monday in Victoria Provincial Court to a three-count charge of breaking and entering and theft and a single charge of breaking and entering with intent to steal.

George Paul Amyott, address unknown, was remanded in custody to April 7 for a pre-sentence report and sentence.

A Victoria policeman told court Amyott broke into Shell Ride-Thur car wash, 846 Johnson, March 14 and stole $53.35 from a cigarette machine. Six days later, he broke into the same place and took $4 and two packages of cigarettes, apparently from the same machine.

On March 21, Amyott broke into the Canadian Legion Britannia branch, 1616 Blanshard, stealing $200 from three cigarette machines. On March 26, he broke into the same building but was caught inside by police before he could use an axe and a screwdriver on a cigarette machine and a jukebox.

Timothy Robert Trevena, 22, of 1544 Bank, was fined $75 after he pleaded guilty to a charge of common assault. Court was told Trevena walked into a Saanich home March 18 to use the washroom when the people there did not know him. A resident objected and one of several punches essayed by Trevena grazed the resident's chin.

□

Douglas Warren Greenfield, 21, HMCS St. Croix, was fined $400 after his plea of guilty to a charge of impaired driving Saturday in Saanich.

□

In traffic court, three persons pleaded guilty before Judge E. F. N. Robinson to separate charges of impaired driving in Victoria. Sentences were a $300 fine and three-month driving ban for Casey Allen Simpson, 19, CFB Naden, stopped March 12; a $350 fine and three-month driving ban for Edwin Warren, 54, 1000 Tillicum, stopped March 10; and a $350 fine and partial four-month driving ban for Robert William Woodford, 30, of 829 Violet, stopped March 12.

□

Gordon Raymond Haire, 35, Island Highway, was fined $250 and given a three-month driving ban after he pleaded guilty to a charge of driving March 15 in Victoria with a blood-alcohol reading of more than .08 per cent.

'Threat to Liberties'

Order Act End Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Civil Liberties Association called on the federal government Monday to revoke the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970.

In a brief to Justice Minister John Turner, the association also said:

"For some time, the government of Canada has been preparing us for new legislation which would contain emergency powers that are especially adaptable for peace time emergencies.

"As matters now stand, we are opposed to the very idea of such legislation. Its assets are dubious; its pitfalls are numerous. The concept of 'something between the Criminal Code and the War Measures Act' poses a continuing and unnecessary threat to civil liberties.

"The Canadian Civil Liberties Association respectfully requests that the Public Order Act be revoked forthwith. Where no charges are pending or offences have been committed under the Criminal Code or the regular law, all property seized should be restored and all charges laid should be withdrawn."

The brief by the 2,000-member association was also on behalf of its affiliates in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

'Laporte's Funeral Dramatized'

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian federal government deliberately staged a dramatic funeral for slain Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte to keep public support during the October crisis, Toronto journalist Douglas Fisher charged Saturday.

Fisher, a former New Democratic Party member of Parliament, was speaking at a conference on television and politics at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute.

Because Mrs. Laporte insisted upon a private funeral, the federal government filled the square adjacent to Notre Dame Cathedral in Montreal with troops and helicoptevs to dramatize the event, Fisher said.

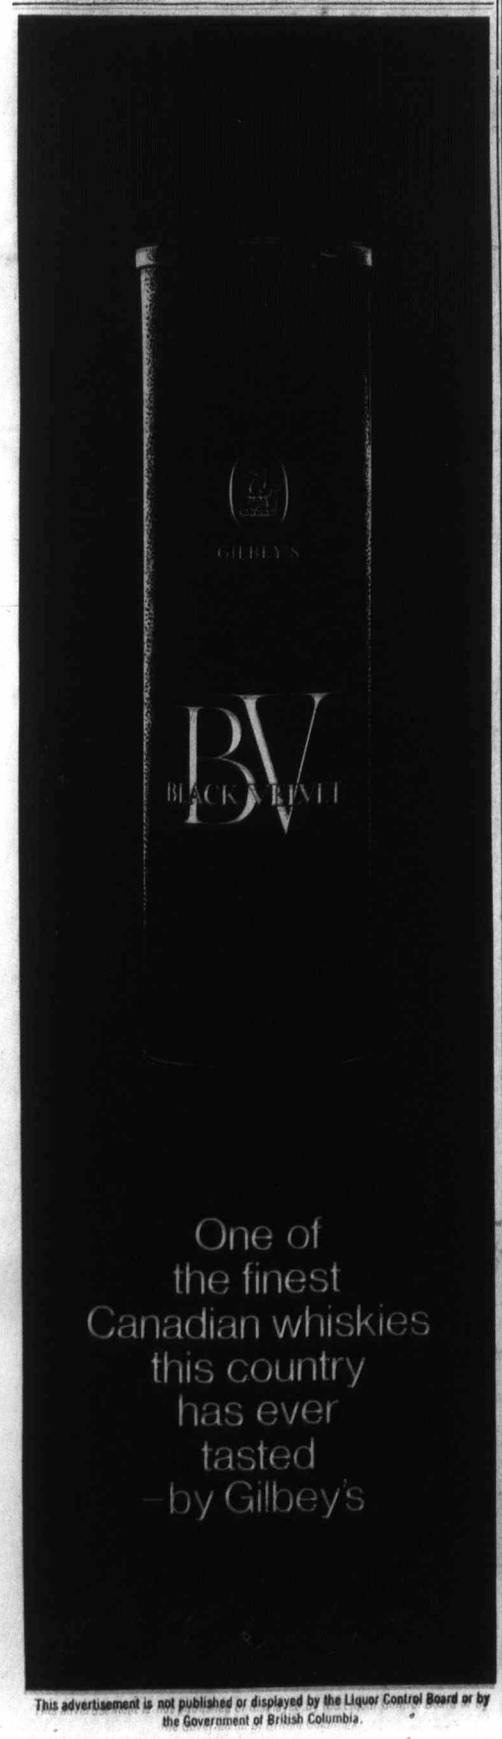

He said Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau had his car parked away from the cathedral entrance and walked the rest of the way, giving the impression he was defying the Front de Liberation du Quebec (FLQ).

Robert Goodman, a media consultant from the United States who assisted with the campaign of U.S. Vice-President Spiro Agnew in the 1968 general election, also addressed the conference of 75 media personnel.

Rightist Group Stages Fight

TORONTO (UPI) — Right-wing members of the Edmund Burke Society, armed with pipes and a Mace-like substance, fought Sunday with members of the audience that came to hear Quebec separatist lawyer Robert Lemieux and labor leader Michel Chartrand.

A janitor was injured by the chemical, a bystander knocked unconscious and five of the demonstrators were arrested.

East Pakistan

Rebels Still Battle

NEW DELHI (AP)—Sheik Mujibur Rahman's rebel force appeared Monday to be keeping up its struggle to make East Pakistan an independent nation, despite the massive show of strength by the armed forces of West Pakistan where the central government is based.

Indian sources said the 51-year-old sheik who heads the now-outlawed Awami League is free, according to information received by the New Delhi government.

West Pakistani authorities have been claiming that the sheik was taken into army custody following his unilateral proclamation Friday of independence for East Pakistan, which is separated from West Pakistan by 1,000 miles of Indian territory.

But Indian sources said West Pakistan armed forces were continuing to bomb some parts of East Pakistan and had used paratroops, apparently trying to wipe out five clandestine transmitters broadcasting messages on behalf of Sheik Mujib.

There have been no independent reports from the East Pakistani government following expulsion of all foreign correspondents by the central government and imposition of stiff press censorship in the rest of the country.

Indian monitors said the Dacca radio station, which the army took over early Friday, went off the air for about seven hours Monday but it was back on the air late Monday.

Official sources in the Indian border town of Agartala, capital of Tripura state, said the sound of tanks, mortars and machineguns could be heard in the Sonamura area of East Pakistan, three miles across the border.

Judge Calls Brothers Violent Men

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two brothers were labelled violent men by Mr. Justice T. A. Dohm Monday and sentenced to long prison terms for attacking a man under treatment in the emergency ward of St. Paul's Hospital.

Danny Ceklay, 33, already serving a term for attempted murder, was sentenced to 10 years.

His brother, Pnano, 30, who had been in custody for seven months awaiting trial, was sentenced to 3½ years.

The two men were convicted Friday by a British Columbia Supreme Court jury of causing bodily harm with intent to wound and to endanger the life of nightclub bouncer Nick Cimmarusti, 30, who was dragged from an operating table in the hospital last Sept. 2, and kicked and beaten by the two men.

Air Hijack Heading For Peking

From AP - UPI

HONG KONG—A Filipino airliner seized by five armed men and carrying 25 hostages landed in Canton today in what was believed to be the first hijack to Communist China.

The plane had 44 passengers and five crew members aboard when it reached Hong Kong. But 19 of the men, women and children aboard were allowed to leave the plane in Hong Kong and the plane flew on to mainland China with an estimated 30 persons aboard—five hijackers and 25 hostages.

The hijackers said they intended to fly to Peking but their first landing was in Canton, 50 miles distant.

During their refueling stopover in Hong Kong a British airport official, J. F. Pickering, went aboard the plane with his hands up and persuaded the hijackers to release 19 of the 44 passengers and five crew members aboard.

Pickering said the hijackers at first agreed to release all of the passengers but later decided to keep some of them as hostages. They also threatened to blow up the plane if it was not allowed to proceed to Peking.

The 19 men, women and children who were released were made to sit under the wingtip of the plane until the refueling was completed and the plane taxied away for takeoff.

An airport spokesman who talked to the released passengers quoted them as saying there were five hijackers, four of them Filipinos and a fifth of unknown nationality.

"Air traffic authorities at Canton were asked to facilitate landing of the plane there and its onward flight to Peking," an airport spokesman said.

"Canton authorities said they would reply in due course. This information was passed on to the hijackers but he apparently decided to take off without waiting," the spokesman said.

If Chinese authorities permitted the plane to land, it was expected that they would release the plane, its crew and passengers and permit them to return to the Philippines. This was the assessment of diplomatic analysts specializing in Chinese affairs.

Authorities first reported that only one hijacker was involved. But Pickering made two trips to the plane and the second time a man who appeared to be a Filipino stood in the doorway of the

House Passes Pensions Bill

Two Socred backbenchers voted with the opposition against new retired teachers pensions Monday, and a third abstained, but all three dissidents were back into line for the final vote.

Premier Bennett called two rapid-fire divisions at the end of the two-hour debate — the first to approve the entire teachers' pension bill in committee and the second to give it third and final reading by the house — which passed by identical votes of 31 to 17.

In both cases the NDP and Liberal members, who had voiced strong objections to section four of the bill which sets out new pensions for retired teachers, voted against the government.

On the question of whether this contentious section should be passed Ernie LeCours (SC—Richmond) and Herb Capozzi (SC—vancouver Centre) said they were opposed and Dr. Scott Wallace (SC—Oak Bay) said he would abstain. Other Socreds expressed reservations.

The section eventually passed by a vote of 28 to 19.

When all the remaining sections in the bill had been approved by voice vote of the committee, Bennett called for a division. Swivelling in his chair, the premier said: "This is on the whole bill. If you want teachers to get increased pensions vote now. We'll see who is against the teachers."

When the opposition, following that division, objected to giving third and final reading to the bill immediately, Bennett called the second standing vote count. He taunted the NDP and Liberal members saying: "Teachers are going to laugh at you all around this province because you are against teachers' pensions. How stupid can you get?"

In the lengthy debate on section four of the bill Opposition Leader Dave Barrett challenged the government to take the approximately $1 million in teacher salaries which it is asking school boards to refund for the one-day teachers strike March 19, and apply it immediately to the raising of retired teachers pensions.

LeCours said this government, like all governments in Canada, was prepared to keep the masses happy and forget about the down-trodden.

While the pension plan was "very good" for active teachers, he said, the government should have explained why it was applying a different formula for computing pensions for those already retired. The Socred also critic-

Rail Halt Snarls Grain

VANCOUVER (CP) — A grain trade spokesman said Monday the shutdown of rail traffic in British Columbia and parts of Alberta has left wheat supplies in the port of Vancouver in a hopeless state.

"The situation is deplorable and just hopeless — what else can I say?" said Tom Milroy, vice-resident of the Vancouver Grain Exchange.

Edward Strang, president of the B.C. Maritime Employers Association, said four ships were loading grain Monday compared with nine last Thursday.

A grain trade official in Winnipeg said in a telephone interview that the rail shutdown "will impede Canada's ability to meet her export commitments on time."

One Vancouver spokesman said the situation is desperate and "as far as we are concerned, the month of April is shot ... ships will be

Murder of At Least 22

Calley Convicted, Death Possibility

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI) — Lieut. William L. Calley Jr. was found guilty Monday of the premeditated murder of at least 22 Vietnamese civilians at My Lai, and was led away to await sentencing — possibly to death.

Calley, his face flushed pink, snapped a weak salute when he heard the verdict, but did not break down.

He was the first U.S. soldier convicted in the March 16, 1968, massacre in which — according to varying estimates — between 102 and 310 persons were slaughtered.

The 27-year-old defendant admitted from the witness stand that he executed villagers, but said he did so on orders from his commanding officer.

In addition to the 22 murders, Calley was also convicted of assault with intent to murder a two-year-old child. A witness testified Calley shot at a child, but couldn't be sure the bullets struck the infant. For that reason the panel of officers reduced the murder charge to assault. The same panel must determine the sentence.

Moments after the six-officer panel rendered its verdict, the judge's office was deluged with phone calls, many of them demanding to know why Calley was convicted.

Defence attorney George Latimer vowed to appeal the case "as high as possible — 90 grounds (reasons) or so."

Calley's court-martial, which began Nov. 12, was the longest military trial in U.S. history, and it took the panel 13 days to bring in a verdict. Four votes were necessary for a conviction.

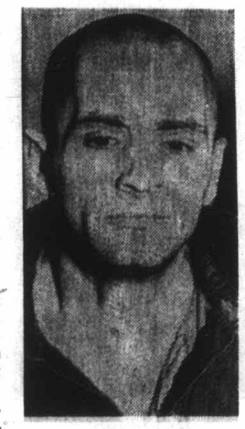

The court-martial manual says death or life imprisonment is mandatory for premeditated murder, but it also says there must be a unanimous vote for death, and that five of the six officers must vote for a life sentence.

The verdict hit Calley and his attorneys like a sledge. Latimer predicted U.S. soldiers on the field of battle will be less likely to obey, and another defence lawyer, Richard Kay, added: "I just don't see how a military man can be guilty of premedidated murder in a combat situation."

Witnesses testified that Calley and his men thought they were going to find the 48th Viet Cong Battalion when they landed in My Lai, but instead found unresisting civilians.

During the more than eight hours Calley spent on the stand, he testified that even the civilians were suspect, however, because of the many mine fields and sniper fire that had taken a heavy toll in U.S. ranks.

He said he executed some of the villagers when his commander, Capt. Ernest L. Medina, told him to "waste" the villagers if he couldn't move them, since they were holding up the infantry sweep.

Manson

From UPI

There have been no executions in the United States since 1967, when two men were executed, one of them in California.

With the addition of Charles Manson and his women codefendants, there are 111 persons in U.S. prisons facing the death penalty.

No women have been executed since 1962.

Jury Rules Death For Manson, Girls

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Death in the gas chamber was decreed by a jury Monday for cult leader Charles Manson and three of his young women disciples for the savage murders of pregnant actress Sharon Tate and six other persons.

Following a sensational trial that lasted nine and one-half months, a middle-class, mainly middle-aged jury brought in the death verdicts for the 36-year-old Manson, and Patricia Krenwinkel, Susan Atkins and Leslie Van Houten.

Appeals of the death penalty will take three to five years it was estimated.

Manson was hauled shouting from the courtroom before the verdicts were even read. And the minute the death penalty was returned against the three women, they began shouting and were dragged bodily from the courtroom by bailiffs before they learned their own fates.

Superior court Judge Charles Older, a former Flying Tiger pilot, told the jurors that, if it was within his power, he would give them the medal of honor for service "above and beyond the call of duty."

In an action rarely seen in courtrooms here, Older stepped down from his bench and walked to the jury box where he shook hands with each of the 12 regular jurors and the three remaining alternates.

Manson, whose outbursts periodically disrupted the marathon trial, looked like a little old man with sunken eyes as he was first led into the courtroom to hear the verdict. A stubble of hair was on his head and he was clad in a drab, blue denim jail uniform.

"You have no authority," he called out to the jury within minutes. "Half of you aren't as good as I am to begin with."

He was led out sputtering by a bailiff

When the first of eight death verdicts was read against Manson, Miss Atkins shouted out, "You all have judged yourselves." The judge ordered her ejected.

Then Miss Krenwinkel yelled, "You're removing yourself from the face of the earth." Miss van Houten shouted that "the whole system is to make money."

The jurors, seven men and five women, had only the alternatives of death or life imprisonment after the long trial.

They convicted all four of first degree murder last Jan. 25 in the killings of the blonde actress, coffee heiress Abigail Folger, men's hairstylist Jay Sebring, Polish film writer Voityck Frykowski, high school student Steven Parent, grocery chain owner Leno LaBianca and his wife, Rosemary.

Manson never took the witness stand in the presence of the jury. The girls, ranging in age from 21 to 23, all confessed but tried to absolve Manson of any connection with the murders.

'Hells of War All At Once'

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP) — "I hope My Lai isn't a tragedy but an eye-opener, even for people who say war is hell," said Lieut. William L. Calley, who was convicted Monday of the premeditated murder of 22 unresisting Vietnamese civilians.

Calley, 27, was white-faced and visibly shaken after the verdict in his court martial, unprecedented in army history. No other American had ever before stood accused of murdering more than 100 persons.

"My Lai has happened in every way; it's not an isolated incident, even in Vietnam," he said.

"The thing that makes My Lai so unique, it was a small tragedy in a small place, but for once, man was able to see all the hells of war all at once.

"I can't say I am proud of ever being at My Lai, or ever participating in war. But I will be extremely proud if My Lai shows the world what war is and that the world needs to do something about stopping wars.

"Many people say war is hell who have never experienced it, but it is more than hell for those people tied up in it," Calley said.

Accused Changes Mind About RCMP Courage

CRANBROOK, (CP) — Dale Merle Nelson discovered the quality and courage of the RCMP while being "hunted" by them, says a hand-written statement read in court Monday at his non-capital murder trial.

The statement, written while Nelson was awaiting trial in Oakalla prison, said he had looked upon the RCMP "as a spineless, backstabbing bunch of jesters" and had taught his children to fear and ridicule them.

Nelson said he had changed his opinion while watching members of the force while they searched for him. He said he could only stare in fascination as a corporal walked calmly towards him during his capture.

He added he could not bring himself to shoot, even though his rifle was at hand. Nelson described himself as a marksman who "could hit a soup can at 50 paces every shot without sights on my rifle."

He was apprehended Sept. 6 after one of British Columbia's largest manhunts, involving more than 40 RCMP officers and three tracking dogs, and set in motion by the discovery of the brutally-slain bodies of five children and three adults in the West Creston area of southeastern B.C.

Nelson is formally charged with the murder of Tracy Wasyk, 7, and Catherine St. Amand, 8.

RCMP officers testified about conversations they had with the accused while guarding him at the Creston jail where he was held briefly before being transferred to Oakalla.

Shakespearean Goodwill Doesn't Include Tourists

STRATFORD-ON-AVON, England (UPI) — Samuel Shakespeare, 90, said Sunday he does not mind tourists coming to see any evidence of his ancestor William except himself.

Shakespeare told newsmen every time tourists come to his door "I have to tell James, my manservant, to tell them to go away."

Samuel is the oldest living descendant of The Bard in The Bard's hometown and is a governor of the Stratford Theatre. He has seen Hamlet 20 times.

"Henry Irving (the actor) was the best (Hamlet). He patted me on the head once and said, 'I owe my living to your name'," Shakespeare said.

He said the family today is not quite up to William's literary stature. Samuel reads a tabloid newspaper, enjoys television serials and gave up writing an autobiography because he found himself mixing up adjectives and adverbs. "The family is very low-brow," he said.

But Samuel said he is regarded as the local master of one thing — keeping a roll-your-cigarette lit a long time. He can keep one going 30 minutes.

"I've had 70 years practice at this. I've never had a chap who could beat me yet," he said.

Buddhists Forgive

The An Quang Buddhist faction, which probably represents a majority of Vietnamese, will cable Calley's jurors asking them to spare the convicted killer, Venerable Huyen Quang, general secretary of the Unified Buddhist Church, said.

plane and talked to Pickering as Pickering stood alongside — an indication that there were other hijackers keeping the passengers covered.

"The hijacker has told officials at the airport that he wants clearance to take off for Peking," a spokesman said. "In view of this demand the Chinese authorities have been informed by all possible channels."

Later, the control tower notified the pilot that he could start the aircraft's engines at his discretion. But they also told him that he should not try to take off until clearance was received from Chinese aviation authorities in Canton.

It was speculated that Canton would be the plane's first stop in China. The airport there is named White Cloud airport and it serves international flights of Pakistan International Airlines and other airlines regularly. It has modern equipment.

The Philippine vice-consul in Hong Kong, Juan Ona, went to the airport and offered himself as a hostage providing all the other passengers were released, the Philippine foreign office in Manila said. Apparently the offer was not accepted.

Control tower officials said the man they talked with aboard the plane spoke English "with what is presumed to be a Philippine accent."

Pickering said he first secured an agreement that all the passengers would be released. But later most of those aboard were held as hostages.

PAL officials in Hong Kong said the pilot asked for an escort plane to China. Airport authorities declined, but asked Chinese aviation authorities in Canton to provide an escort.

coming in fast and we won't have the grain to fill them."

The Canadian Wheat Board was reported already paying demurrage charges for some ships backed up waiting to load grain.

A spokesman for the Grain Workers Union said 160 of its members already have been laid off in Vancouver and the number is expected to grow to about 200 — half the working force — by late today.

In Victoria it was believed that shipments of Eastern and American periodicals were being delayed because of the book-offs. A day shift of mail sorters was sent home early from the post office Monday because there was little mail for them to sort.

A post office spokesman said he was not sure the train stoppages were the reason for the lack of mail, but most periodicals and magazines usually travelled by train.

However, if it was discovered delays were being encountered, the post office would use trucks to move the mail within the province.

The shutdown also was affecting B.C.'s forest industry.

Bob Gallagher of the Northern Interior Lumbermen's Association said a "good percentage" of the 6,000 workers in mills in the Prince George district will be laid off this week due to a shortgage of boxcars.

A spokesman for the Council of Forest Industries said Evans Products will lay off 450 men at its two playwood mills in the Golden area and another 50 in Vancouver.

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — The first manned test of the Apollo 15 moon landing ship in an airless chamber was postponed Monday until Wednesday because someone failed to open an oxygen valve.

Capozzi expressed concern about the government's apparent failure to make clear to teachers that the door was open for further talks aimed at providing better pensions for retired teachers in the near future.

Wallace said it was arguable whether the government or the BCTF was more to blame for the plight of retired teachers whose inadequate pension increases made him "very unhappy."

Limiting his comments to general principles in a highly complicated field, Wallace said: "All I'm saying is that retired teachers aren't getting a fair shake."

He suggested the teaching profession should "put its money where its mouth is" and either offer to contribute another one-half per cent of their salary or else dilute some pension increases of up to 40 per cent in order to help their retired colleagues.

Robert Wenman (SC—Delta) and Bert Price (SC—Burrard) were among the Socreds who expressed reservations about the handling of retired teachers pensions but voted with the government on the section.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, a former school teacher, said the one-day strike by teachers in support of higher pensions for their retired colleagues was a "professional disgrace" because it amounted simply to "taking a day off at the end of the week."

Kissing Dog on Mouth Not Advised Practice

By G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please explain the effects, good and bad, of kissing dogs on the mouth. Is it true that dogs carry fewer germs in the mouth than humans? My wife claims so. Kindly print some facts on this. — T.M.

I don't know how many dog-kissers there are, but there are some — my mail tells me so.

Effects, good and bad? Well, it's true that bacterial and other germ counts are lower in dogs' mouths, but that's a far cry, a very far cry, from saying there aren't any

Various diseases can be claims so. Kidnly print some humans. These are called zoonoses (zoh-ON-oh-seez). More than a hundred of them have been identified, but not all involve dogs, of course. There are diseases that can be transmitted by cattle, cats, rodents, bats, rabbits, and other creatures.

So sticking just to dogs, transmittable disorders range from contact with saliva, skin, and excreta. (Some folks can be allergic to animals, too.)

Other disorders involve bacteria, viruses, parasites. For an example of the latter, dogs can have a parasite called the heart worm, and this has been found in human lungs.

Salmonella — a cause of "food poisoning" — can be transmitted by dogs — and other conditions.

Now in actuality, transmission of diseases from animals to man is not particularly common, but it can happen, and it does happen, and so far as I'm concerned, I'd just as soon not take any needless chances. So I, personally, do not kiss dogs on the mouth.

So far as that goes, I don't kiss them anywhere. I'm willing to stick to just patting them.

As to the benefits of kissing dogs on the mouth — I'm afraid I don't know any. And I seriously doubt if the dog will feel rejected or suffer any other emotional trauma by being deprived of kisses.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: One of our relatives, not yet six months old, has a cleft palate and is having digestive troubles as a result. What can be done, and how soon can it be corrected? — W.W.

I'm puzzled, as to why, in a city with the medical facilities yours has, something hasn't been done already. Cleft palate is usually treated a good bit younger than six months. This child ought to be taken to children's hospital or to a pediatrician. There's nothing you can do yourself about it.

Plane Flights Curbed

Restrictions have been placed on CF-101 Voodoo jet flights but an Air Defence Command spokesman said Monday that no connection should be made between that decision and a Voodoo crash at CFB Comox Feb. 10.

The comment was made by Major George Lowes, public relations officer for Air Defence Command which has its headquarters at North Bay, Ont.

He said that flying has been restricted to mandatory operational flights in support of the North American Air Defence Command.

Sea Search

Engines from the plane, which caught fire and crashed shortly after takeoff at Comox base, have been sent to Montreal for a complete examination.

A base spokesman said Sunday that the engines and most of the fuselage were miniature submarine near Texada Island.

Inquiry Ends

He said that an inquiry into the accident had been completed but a report would not be released until tests on the engines were completed next week.

The two crewmen bailed out safely.

Lowes said the restrictions cover Voodoos at three squadron bases — Comox, Chatham, N.B., and Bagotville, Que. plus a detachment at Val d'Or, Que.

He said they were imposed because of a technical problem in the engines but he did not define the problem.

Lowes said the solution of the problem was known and it was just a matter of time before flying would return to normal.

Training Plans Spruce Up Comox Parks

By AGNES FLETT

COMOX — A welfare training program with a difference will equip a number of men in the Comox area for work in any parks program, according to Comox Mayor Ron Ellis.

"And there is a great future in parks maintenance and construction employment," Ellis said.

Most training programs start with two weeks in classroom work alternating with two weeks on the job, and it is difficult to convince the men to stay in class for that long, Ellis said. The Comox plan involves only brief class periods, which the men find more suitable, he said.

Another said, "It's rough trying to go to school again. I can only hack it because I can get out on the job most of the time."

With the project only two weeks underway, the progress looks good, Ellis said. The men are interested in their work and glad to be in training rather than "on welfare," he said.

The men, all married, now earn $350 a month as job training assistance. Total cost of the program is $43,000 with the federal government paying 50 per cent and B.C. and Comox splitting the other half. Each course lasts six months.

The men are constructing an adventure playground in a public park, including some exercise possibilities such as a jogging track around Comox Park.

Ellis said he is sure the course will help the men find full-time employment, and that some might be hired for Comox and district park programs.

Campbell River Digs In for Cleanup

Torrents of rain and high winds cut into Campbell River Society for Pollution and Environmental Control cleanup day plans for Saturday, but Mayor Ken Forde, helped by Don Huntley, left, did plant tree on Tyee Plaza boulevard. Other flowering trees, donated by Campbell River nurseries, were planted on boulevard by Mrs. Rose McKay, Citizen of Year; Wilf Shipway, Chamber of Commerce president, and Dennis Fulton, SPEC vice-president.—(Helen Mitchell)

Plane Lost on Circle Flight

CAMPBELL RIVER — An air and sea serach was scheduled to begin at daybreak today for a small plane with two Campbell River men aboard reported missing on a 60-mile flight Monday afternoon.

The Pacific Rescue Centre, Victoria, identified the two aboard the plane as the pilot, Gordon Jeune, 39, and a passenger whose name was given only as H. Young.

A rescue centre spokesman said the float-equipped Cessna 180 left Monday morning on a circle flight from Campbell River, to Okeover Arm on the Mainland, to Grassy Creek near the north end of the Island, Topaze Harbor on the Mainland north of Johnstone Strait, and back to Campbell River.

Owners of the plane, Trans-Mountain Air Services, reported it overdue when it had not returned to Campbell River by 4:10 p.m.

Investigation by the rescue centre showed the plane had reached Okeover Arm and had left there to fly to Grassy Creek about 12:30 p.m. But it had never arrived at Grassy Creek.

The rescue centre estimated it would take the Cessna, cruising at about 100 miles an hour, a little over half an hour to make the flight.

A Labrador helicopter and a Buffalo aircraft from CFB Comox made a brief search of the area Monday night. They will be joined today by the Coast Guard cutter Ready.

Port Alberni

Public Service Decreasing, Mayor Says

PORT ALBERNI—"Port Alberni is not getting a very good break in public services," Mayor Fred Bishop told council members Monday night.

Bishop said he had written to Public Works Minister Arthur Laing in his capacity as cabinet minister from B.C. calling his attention to the decrease in federal government services in Port Alberni during recent months.

He said, "I conside we are not getting very good service, considering the importance of this port."

Indian affairs department and Unemployment Insurance services have been removed to Nanaimo, and the mayor said he believed there were also reductions in immigrations and customs services.

He protested that little by little the federal government was taking away not only the services but employment from the area.

Bishop said he felt that "nothing but bad" had come from moving Indian affairs to Nanaimo, and that this was a retrograde step with a real loss of services to the Indian people.

He said he also brought up the matter that pilots for all the ocean-going vessels visiting the port live out of town, "some as far away as Victoria." This put an extra drain on the taxpayer, he said, with the additional costs of bringing pilots to the valley to work.

He said he had received an acknowledgement from Laing who said he would take the matter up with other cabinet ministers, including Otto Lang, minister without portfolio; Bryce Mackasey, labor, and Jean Chretien, indian affairs, who are in charge of have suffered cutbacks in the area.

Four representatives of the MacLean-Hunter group will be contacted and advised that council is considering revoking their business licences.

The four men will be asked to meet council in committee before April 30 to be heard on the matter.

Aldermen said the step was being taken because of a rash of complaints in the community that the young men were giving householders the story that they were taking a public relations course, and that they implied they were not selling magazines.

Council has pursued a policy of granting only a few door-to-door business licences, particularly on the grounds that Port Alberni is a shift-work town and that residents have a right to be free of the annoyance of salesmen calling when shift-workers are sleeping.

Nanaimo Water, Sewer

'No Cohesion' Cancels Law

NANAIMO — Legislation that would have allowed the Nanaimo Regional District to take over the Greater Nanaimo water and sewer boards has been cancelled by Municipal Minister Dan Campbell.

Monday morning Campbell said the legislation was pulled at the request of MLA Frank Ney.

Campbell said, "There is obviously no cohesion in that area, no understanding of what we are trying to do."

"It was just enabling legislation and I'm going to pull it.

"They'll have to work out their own salvation," he said.

The enabling legislation would have permitted the regional district board to take over both the water and sewer boards at the request of the regional district.

Ken Alexander, chairman of the water and sewer boards, commended Ney and Campbell for lifting the legislation which he said was unpopular with many people in the area.

He said, "The members of the board are well aware of the financial difficulties involved in financing the sewer program, and in due course they will come up with a suitable formula which will be submitted to Nanaimo city council and trustees of the member improvement districts."

He said that upon their agreeing to a plan, the sewer board will go to Victoria and discuss it with Campbell and officials of the municipal affairs department.

Alexander stressed that he is talking about the operation of the sewer board only.

The problem is that the sewer board has a $6.5 million pollution control program planned but it lacks taxing authority. It can borrow only up to 6 per cent of the total assessment of the serviced areas.

Alexander said the sewer board can borrow up to $4 million but that the board would be contacting the minister, "before anything like that amount of money is spent."

He said, "In all probability we will be discussing legislation for the next session of the legislature.

He said such legislation should be proclaimed at the request of Nanaimo city council and the member improvement districts served at the time of proclamation.

"It is Nanaimo city and the districts that have put all the money into it," he said.

Ney said Campbell told him the enabling legislation was not to go into effect without the consent of the city and district and was only there to help solve the problem of a six mill increase to taxpayers on proceeding with the construction of a new sewage treatment plant.

He said the sewer board must now figure out a formula that will give the taxpayer more shelter than presently available.

"I think part of their concern was the growing power of the regional districts and the lessening of their economy.

"The six mill increase is a big one for taxpayers these days and thats the other side of the coin; and the one the minister was concerned about."

Ney suggested a system similar to one used by the hospital board where the regional district administers capital debt refunding and equipment financing only and the hospital board looks after all other matters.

Teacher Sent For Trial

DUNCAN — A Cowichan school district junior high school teacher has been remanded to April 30 for trial after he pleaded not guilty to a charge of unlawfully causing bodily harm to a student by allegedly striking him in the face with his fist.

Duncan's Hall Inadequate, Artists Claim

Several weeks ago, city council approved construction of a $185,000 library-senior citizens' centre, attached to which would be a centennial hall.

However, since the decision was made, a number of Duncan residents, particularly members of local performing arts groups have pointed out that the hall, which would be equipped with a small stage, theatrical productions or concerts.

They claim that the stage would be inadequate for that type of presentation and point out that seating capacity would be restricted to about 320 people.

Arts Council

Recently, executive members of Cowichan Valley regional arts council and representatives of other local groups met with a subcommittee of Duncan centennial committee to discuss the poject.

Ted Fox, arts council president, said his group was pleased that they had been invited to such a meeting.

He said that Ald. Martin Lukaitis "told us it was Duncan's money which was being used for the centennial project and all available funds were being out into the project."

Lukaitis told the representatives that if the project was to be changed, then the additional money would have to come from sources other than provincial or federal grants.

Views Invited

"He did not say that changes could not be made and then he invited us to give ou views on an auditorium. After looking at the plans, we did not think that the proposed centennial centre offered any facility which was not already existing at Duncan and that the proposed auditorium could not be used for any of the performing arts."

Fox pointed outs that efforts to adapt the proposed hall for the performing arts would be useless unless the city changed the whole plan.

He said that two-thirds of the proposed centre space would be needed to make a useful small theatre with a seating capacity for about 450 people.

"It was also suggested to lift the library portion of the centre and put it on top of the proposed senior citizen facility which would give sufficient space for a theatre.

Fox said the performing arts groups involved would consider giving $5,000 toward revision of the architect's plans if the city agreed to provide sufficient floor space in the proposed building, provide the theatre with a slanting floor and appoint John Getgood, Cowichan high school drama teacher, as a consultant to the architects.

Like 12 Others

Peter Yelland, conductor of the 95-voice Polyphonic Singers, who also attended the meeting thought the proposed centennial hall looked "like 12 rooms we already have in the city. However, we were thrilled to have been invited to discuss the plans. We feel that the council was being farsighted in asking an opinion from people who would actually use the facilities."

Theatre Plan For Study

When council discussed the city's $185,000 proposal for a library, senior citizens' centre and hall Monday night representatives from a number of cultural groups, including the regional council, put forward a proposal for a theatre.

Quaife suggested, however, that before council has another look at the proposal, Duncan cultural groups should try to find out how the additional money needed could be raised.

Local groups had already indicated that the hall would be inadquate for theatrical needs. Proposals for a theatre were made by Ted Fox, regional arts council president, John Getgood, vice-president, and Peter Yelland, conductor for the Polyphonic Singers.

A strong supporter for the theatre proposal was Lukaitis. He pointed out that since the original presentation certain facts had emerged which had not been previously known.

He said that there was a different picture now because the cultural groups had expressed their willingness to help financially.

Lukaitis thought that a theatre at Duncan would lift the city's image immensely and "maybe would be patted on our back by people from here to Ottawa."

Fox thought that if the library were to be placed above the elderly people's centre, there would be sufficient room. An additional cost of $50,000 was mentioned in connection with that suggestion.

Charges Possible

COURTENAY — Courtenay RCMP reported Monday night that charges may be laid in the case of a hit-and-run driver who left two pedestrians lying injured in a ditch Friday night. James Madden 20, and his wife Susan, 21, were taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, Comox after the accident.

TOFINO — Tofino RCMP were continuing their investigation Monday into a fire on Opitsat Indian Reserve Saturday afternoon in which nine-month-old Fabian Williams died. Coroner Mrs. Myrtle Saxton of Ucluelet has ordered an inquest which will open April 14.

Priests Will Administer Indian Student Hostel

By SUSIE BIRD

TOFINO — The Oblate Fathers will act as administration for the new hostel for Indian students at Tofino, a meeting of west coast Indians has decided.

About 100 Indians from as far north as Kyuoquot and south to Victoria met at the century-old Christie Indian school on Meares Island to discuss appointment of an administrator for the hostel. The hostel will house Indian students attending school in Tofino, and Christie school will be closed.

Barney Williams Sr., chairman of the West Coast Advisory Board, told the group that Ottawa has concluded negotiations with Port Alberni school board, and he, as board chairman, had signed the release of the money for the erection of the new Tofino school.

The meeting also saw a video tape of a Mission City gathering where the federal government offered the Indian people the chance to take over hostel and residence administration. The advisory board had said then they would make no decision without consulting the people.

Chief Simon Lucas of the Hesquiat Reserve proposed that the Indians take over administration and staffing of the residence.

Louie Frank of the Ahousat Reserve said that although the Indians had been discriminated against for the past 100 years, they should not begin discrimination against non-Indians now.

Shorty Frank of the Opitsat Reserve said there had been a low percentage of success in the few instances where Indians ran their own schools on the reserves. He recommended that the administration remain with the Oblate Fathers until an Indian was properly trained to take over the job.

Chief Jack Patrick of Ucluelet Reserve also recommended the Oblate priests, as there was no one yet prepared among the Indians.

Rev. Lorne Mackey, speaking on behalf of the priests, said that although they had served on the coast for many years, the Oblate priests are prepared at any moment to hand over the administration to the Indian people if they desired.

Essays Clear Smoke

DUNCAN — A Grade 8 student from Duncan elementary school received notice that she has won third prize in a province-wide essay contest.

The cheque for $10 will be presented to Maria Aquino, the winning student, April 26 at the Duncan-Khowhemun Parent-Teacher Association meeting.

The contest was sponsored by the B.C. Parent-Teacher Federation and was open to all children in British Columbia in either of the two Grades 6 and 7.

A total of 1,200 essays were received from 106 schools. The essays were written on the subject of Smoking, Health and You."

Home for Seniors

Major-General George Pearkes turned soil in Nanaimo Saturday for 26-unit senior citizens housing project. Sponsored by Branch 10, Royal Canadian Legion, at cost of $260,000, unit covers 3¾ acres and is expected to be completed in June. Following ceremony, Pearkes presented spade to president Ted Dolan for safekeeping. It will be on display on Branch 10 premises. Standing behind Pearkes is past president Gerry Skeldoch.—(Frank Graves)

Ucluelet Walks For Centennial

UCLUELET — Not only did Ucluelet's recent walkathon help the community's centennial project, it also boosted ecumenism in the area.

Among the 242 marchers who left the starting line at Ucluelet secondary school was Rev. E. J. Eagan, Roman Catholic priest for Ucluelet and Tofino. Eagan, who completed the 26 miles, was sponsored by Rev. Eric Blackstock, Anglican minister for both areas and Pastor George Hardy, Ucluelet Evangelical Church.

Finishing the course were 108 walkers. Organizers hope to collect about $4,000 for the village's centennial project — a recreation park which will include a pool area and ball field.

The marchers ranged in ages from five to 50. They were escorted from the school to the village boundary by Ucluelet fire truck. An ambulance crew went along in case there was an emergency and Ucluelet Lions' Club arranged for cars to patrol the route to pick up those who were unable to go any further. Tofino Lions Club also helped with arrangements. Members of the two groups had an inter-club wager on who would reach the finish first which Tofino won.

The course followed the Ucluelet - Tofino highway to the Green Point provincial campsite at Long Beach. Walkers returned to Ucluelet on the same route.

First to finish were Leo Eeftink, 13, and his brother Ted, 14. They are sons of Mr. and Mrs. John Eeftink of Ucluelet. After leaving the start at 8 a.m., they finished at 1:30 p.m.

Some Tofino people decided to help out by joining the walk. Among them were Mrs. Catherine Monks and Mrs. Mary Hayes, are employed by Tofino Hospital.

WOOD—In loving memory of our dear father and grandfather, Henry James (Harry) Wood, passed away March 4, 1937, and our dear mother and grandmother, passed away March 30, 1968.

Sweeps Prize 'Drop In Ocean'

A Victoria widow who dislikes publicity says an Irish Sweepstakes windfall of $48,000 is "nothing to get excited about — like a drop in the ocean"

Olive Horan, a nurse, and mother of two boys says she thinks she will apply for a bank loan Monday so she can go away on holiday until things calm down.

She had been off work ill for a week when she heard the news Saturday morning of her second prize in the Irish Hospital Sweepstake. Tandy, the horse she had drawn, ran second in the Lincolnshire Handicap Saturday.

"I've not had any sleep since 6:30 a.m. when the news came through — and the doctor says I should rest in bed.

"The phone's been ringing and there's been no peace," she said.

"I wanted to stay anonymous — I didn't want my name to appear at all. People should be allowed some privacy."

Mrs. Horan said that by the time she has paid for her house and paid her debts, and looked after her family the money will be gone.

"I have sisters and brothers who all need help," she said. "This is like a drop in the ocean with all the other things. I certainly shan't stop working.

"I don't know what all the excitement is about, anyway," she said. "If it had been the $121,000 prize I could see it — but $48,000 . . ."

The big prize of $121,600 was won by a 12-year-old schoolgirl, Colleen Blomquist of Malakwa, B.C., who said the first thing she will do with the prize is buy a $169 western saddle for her Arabian quarterhorse, Kitten.

"I'm also going to buy a horse for my sister Judy," said Colleen.

Her mother, Joan, said she had purchased the ticket which was drawn on Double Cream and put it in Colleen's name because "she has a good Irish name."

Colleen is the daughter of Walter and Joan Blomquist, part owners of Blomquist Bros. Logging Ltd., of Malakwa, 13 miles west of Revelstoke on the Trans-Canada Highway.

Mrs. Blomquist said the family would take a trip to her native England and her husband's native Sweden.

Another British Columbian who won a $48,000 prize was Hazel Smith of Smithers — she also intends to buy a horse with part of her winnings.

Five Canadians, including Colleen won the big prize — two of them from Ontario and the other two from Saskatchewan.

A. T. Tom Tompkins, a retired maintenance foreman of Oakville, Ont., watched the results come in on a teletype at the local newspaper office.

Air Hijack Heading For Peking

From AP - UPI

HONG KONG—A Filipino airliner seized by five armed men and carrying 25 hostages landed in Canton today in what was believed to be the first hijack to Communist China.

The plane had 44 passengers and five crew members aboard when it reached Hong Kong. But 19 of the men, women and children aboard were allowed to leave the plane in Hong Kong and the plane flew on to mainland China with an estimated 30 persons aboard—five hijackers and 25 hostages.

The hijackers said they intended to fly to Peking but their first landing was in Canton, 50 miles distant.

During their refueling stopover in Hong Kong a British airport official, J. F. Pickering, went aboard the plane with his hands up and persuaded the hijackers to release 19 of the 44 passengers and five crew members aboard.

Pickering said the hijackers at first agreed to release all of the passengers but later decided to keep some of them as hostages. They also threatened to blow up the plane if it was not allowed to proceed to Peking.

The 19 men, women and children who were released were made to sit under the wingtip of the plane until the refueling was completed and the plane taxied away for takeoff.

An airport spokesman who talked to the released passengers quoted them as saying there were five hijackers, four of them Filipinos and a fifth of unknown nationality.

The hijackers were armed with two pistols, a carbine and a pair of scissors, the passengers said.

"Air traffic authorities at Canton were asked to facilitate landing of the plane there and its onward flight to Peking," an airport spokesman said.

"Canton authorities said they would reply in due course. This information was passed on to the hijackers but they apparently decided to take off without waiting," the spokesman said.

If Chinese authorities permitted the plane to land, it was expected that they would release the plane, its crew and passengers and permit them to return to the Philippines. This was the assessment of diplomatic analysts specializing in Chinese affairs.

Authorities first reported that only one hijacker was involved. But Pickering made two trips to the plane and the second time a man who appeared to be a Filipino stood in the doorway of the

Murder of At Least 22

Court Martial Convicts Calley

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI) — Lieut. William L. Calley Jr. was found guilty Monday of the premeditated murder of at least 22 Vietnamese civilians at My Lai, and was led away to await sentencing — possibly to death.

Calley, his face flushed pink, snapped a weak salute when he heard the verdict, but did not break down.

He was the first U.S. soldier convicted in the March 16, 1968, massacre in which — according to varying estimates — between 102 and 310 persons were slaughtered.

The 27-year-old defendant admitted from the witness stand that he executed villagers, but said he did so on orders from his commanding officer.

In addition to the 22 murders, Calley was also convicted of assault with intent to murder a two-year-old child. A witness testified Calley shot at a child, but couldn't be sure the bullets struck the infant. For that reason the panel of officers reduced the murder charge to assault. The same panel must determine the sentence.

Moments after the six-officer panel rendered its verdict, the judge's office was deluged with phone calls, many of them demanding to know why Calley was convicted.

Defence attorney George Latimer vowed to appeal the case "as high as possible — 90 grounds (reasons) or so."

Calley's court-martial, which began Nov. 12, was the longest military trial in U.S. history, and it took the panel 13 days to bring in a verdict. Four votes were necessary for a conviction.

The court-martial manual says death or life imprisonment is mandatory for premeditated murder, but it also says there must be a unanimous vote for death, and that five of the six officers must vote for a life sentence.

The verdict hit Calley and his attorneys like a sledge. Latimer predicted U.S. soldiers on the field of battle will be less likely to obey, and another defence lawyer, Richard Kay, added: "I just don't see how a military man can be guilty of premeditated murder in a combat situation."

Witnesses testified that Calley and his men thought they were going to find the 48th Viet Cong Battalion when they landed in My Lai, but instead found unresisting civilians.

During the more than eight hours Calley spent on the stand, he testified that even the civilians were suspect, however, because of the many mine fields and sniper fire that had taken a heavy toll in U.S. ranks.

He said he executed some of the villagers when his commander, Capt. Ernest L. Medina, told him to "waste" the villagers if he couldn't move them, since they were holding up the infantry sweep.

In an action rarely seen in courtrooms here, Older stepped down from his bench and walked to the jury box where he shook hands with each of the 12 regular jurors and the three remaining alternates.

Manson, whose outbursts periodically disrupted the marathon trial, looked like a little old man with sunken eyes as he was first led into the courtroom to hear the verdict. A stubble of hair was on his head and he was clad in a drab, blue denim jail uniform.

"You have no authority," he called out to the jury within minutes. "Half of you aren't as good as I am to begin with."

He was led out sputtering by a bailiff.

When the first of eight death verdicts was read against Manson, Miss Atkins shouted out, "You all have judged yourselves." The judge ordered her ejected.

Then Miss Krenwinkel yelled, "You're removing yourself from the face of the earth." Miss van Houten shouted that "the whole system is to make money."

The jurors, seven men and five women, had only the alternatives of death or life imprisonment after the long trial.

They convicted all four of first degree murder last Jan. 25 in the killings of the blonde actress, coffee heiress Abigail Folger, men's hairstylist Jay Sebring, Polish film writer Voityck Frykowski, high school student Steven Parent, grocery chain owner Leno LaBianca and his wife, Rosemary.

Manson never took the witness stand in the presence of the jury. The girls, ranging in age from 21 to 23, all confessed but tried to absolve Manson of any connection with the murders.

No One Executed In U.S. Since '67

From UPI

There have been no executions in the United States since 1967, when two men were executed, one of them in California.

With the addition of Charles Manson and his women codefendants, there are 111 persons in U.S. prisons facing the death penalty.

No women have been executed since 1962.

Of the 3,856 persons executed between 1930 and 1965, only 32 were women.

Jury Rules Death For Manson, Girls

LOS ANGELES (UPI) Death in the gas chamber was decreed by a jury Monday for cult leader Charles Manson and three of his young women disciples for the savage murders of pregnant actress Sharon Tate and six other persons.

Following a sensational trial that lasted nine and one-half months, a middle-class, mainly middle-aged jury brought in the death verdicts for the 36-year-old Manson, and Patricia Krenwinkel, Susan Atkins and Leslie Van Houten.

Appeals of the death penalty will take three to five years it was estimated.

Manson was hauled shouting from the courtroom before the verdicts were even read. And the minute the death penalty was returned against the three women, they began shouting and were dragged bodily from the courtroom by bailiffs before they learned their own fates.

Superior court Judge Charles Older, a former Flying Tiger pilot, told the jurors that, if it was within his power, he would give them the medal of honor for service "above and beyond the call of duty."

House Passes Pensions Bill

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

Two Socred backbenchers voted with the opposition against new retired teachers pensions Monday, and a third abstained, but all three dissidents were back into line for the final vote.

Premier Bennett called two rapid-fire divisions at the end of the two-hour debate — the first to approve the entire teacher pension bill in committee and the second to give it third and final reading by the house — which passed by identical votes of 31 to 17.

In both cases the NDP and Liberal members, who had voiced strong objections to section four of the bill which sets out new pensions for retired teachers, voted against the government.

On the question of whether this contentious section should be passed Ernie LeCours (SC—Richmond) and Herb Capozzi (SC—vancouver Centre) said they were opposed and Dr. Scott Wallace (SC—Oak Bay) said he would abstain. Other Socreds expressed reservations.

The section eventually passed by a vote of 28 to 19.

When all the remaining sections in the bill had been approved by voice vote of the committee, Bennett called for a division. Swivelling in his chair, the premier said: "This is on the whole bill. If you want teachers to get increased pensions vote now. We'll see who is against the teachers."

When the opposition, following that division, objected to giving third and final reading to the bill immediately, Bennett called the second standing vote count. He taunted the NDP and Liberal members saying: "Teachers are going to laugh at you all around this province because you are against teachers' pensions. How stupid can you get?"

In the lengthy debate on section four of the bill Opposition Leader Dave Barrett challenged the government to take the approximately $1 million in teacher salaries which it is asking school boards to refund for the one-day teachers strike March 19, and apply it immediately to the raising of retired teachers pensions.

"If you are sincere and not cynical" the NDP leader told the government members, "then lay this money on the table for the retired teachers."

LeCours said this government, like all governments in Canada, was prepared to keep the masses happy and forget about the down-trodden.

While the pension plan was "very good" for active teachers, he said, the government should have explained why it was applying a different formula for computing pensions for those already retired. The Socred also critic-

Rail Halt Snarls Grain

● Railway talks resume today. Page 16

VANCOUVER (CP) — A grain trade spokesman said Monday the shutdown of rail traffic in British Columbia and parts of Alberta has left wheat supplies in the port of Vancouver in a hopeless state.

"The situation is deplorable and just hopeless — what else can I say?" said Tom Milroy, vice-resident of the Vancouver Grain Exchange.

Edward Strang, president of the B.C. Maritime Employers Association, said four ships were loading grain Monday compared with nine last Thursday.

A grain trade official in Winnipeg said in a telephone interview that the rail shutdown "will impede Canada's ability to meet her export commitments on time."

One Vancouver spokesman said the situation is desperate and "as far as we are concerned, the month of April is shot . . . ships will be

'Hells of War All At Once'

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP) — "I hope My Lai isn't a tragedy but an eye-opener, even for people who say war is hell," said Lieut. William L. Calley, who was convicted Monday of the premeditated murder of 22 unresisting Vietnamese civilians.

Calley, 27, was white-faced and visibly shaken after the verdict in his court martial, unprecedented in army history. No other American had ever before stood accused of murdering more than 100 persons.

"My Lai has happened in every way; it's not an isolated incident, even in Vietnam," he said.

"The thing that makes My Lai so unique, it was a small tragedy in a small place, but for once, man was able to see all the hells of war all at once.

"I can't say I am proud of ever being at My Lai, or ever participating in war. But I will be extremely proud if My Lai shows the world what war is and that the world needs to do something about stopping wars.

"Many people say war is hell who have never experienced it, but it is more than hell for those people tied up in it," Calley said.

Accused Changes Mind About RCMP Courage

CRANBROOK, (CP) — Dale Merle Nelson discovered the quality and courage of the RCMP while being "hunted" by them, says a hand-written statement read in court Monday at his non-capital murder trial.

The statement, written while Nelson was awaiting trial in Oakalla prison, said he had looked upon the RCMP "as a spineless, backstabbing bunch of jesters" and had taught his children to fear and ridicule them.

Nelson said he had changed his opinion while watching members of the force while they searched for him. He said he could only stare in fascination as a corporal walked calmly towards him during his capture.

He added he could not bring himself to shoot even though his rifle was at hand. Nelson described himself as a marksman who "could hit a soup can at 50 paces every shot without sights on my rifle."

He was apprehended Sept. 6 after one of British Columbia's largest manhunts, involving more than 40 RCMP officers and three tracking dogs, and set in motion by the discovery of the brutally-slain bodies of five children and three adults in the West Creston area of southeastern B.C.

Nelson is formally charged with the murder of Tracy Wasyk, 7, and Catherine St. Amand, 8.

Shakespearean Goodwill Doesn't Include Tourists

STRATFORD-ON-AVON, England (UPI) — Samuel Shakespeare, 90, said Sunday he does not mind tourists coming to see any evidence of his ancestor William except himself.

Shakespeare told newsmen every time tourists come to his door "I have to tell James, my manservant, to tell them to go away."

Samuel is the oldest living descendant of The Bard in The Bard's hometown and is a governor of the Stratford Theatre. He has seen Hamlet 20 times.

"Henry Irving (the actor) was the best (Hamlet). He patted me on the head once and said, 'I owe my living to your name'," Shakespeare said.

He said the family today is not quite up to William's literary stature. Samuel reads a tabloid newspaper, enjoys television serials and gave up writing an autobiography because he found himself mixing up adjectives and adverbs. "The family is very low-brow," he said.

But Samuel said he is regarded as the local master of one thing — keeping a roll-your-cigarette lit a long time. He can keep one going 30 minutes.

"I've had 70 years practice at this. I've never had a chap who could beat me yet," he said.

Buddhists Forgive

The An Quang Buddhist faction, which probably represents a majority of Vietnamese, will cable Calley's jurors asking them to spare the convicted killer, Venerable Huyen Quang, general secretary of the Unified Buddhist Church, said.
